The authority had a committee visit the field Feb. 17 to gather information on weather conditions, runways, and other facilities at the request of the Borough Council.

Black Moshannon was brought into the local airport picture when the College announced it had been offered a $1 yearly lease on the field and said it would turn the proposition over to the authority.

The College has maintained it is not interested in operating an airport anywhere. The authority indicated Thursday it favored the Centre County Air Depot as the site for the county airport.

This annual award is presented by the American Schools and Colleges association to a "man or woman in the U.S. who has risen from humble beginnings to outstanding success and achievement through diligence, industry, and ability."

Last year the prize was voted to the President, but he was unable to go to New York and receive it, as required by the rules of the award.

The nominees will be voted on by some 3000 students in colleges throughout the country. The six students on campus voting for the award winner will be James Worth, All-College president; Marilyn Levitt, president of Panhellenic council; Marvin Krasnansky, editor of the Daily Collegian; John Laubach, president of the Association of Independent Men; Stanley Wengert, president of Interfraternity Council; and Mary Jane Woodrow, president of Women's Student Government Association.

All alumni holders of bachelor degrees in the classes prior to and including the class of 1948 are eligible to vote for three alumni to serve on the College Board of Trustees, President Milton S. Eisenhower has announced.

The nomination ballots for the annual election will be mailed to alumni about March 1. The deadline for returning the ballots to the secretary of the board is March 31. The names of alumni who receive 50 or more nominations will be placed on the final election ballots to be mailed about May 1.

Three alumni trustees are elected each year to serve three-year terms without pay. They may, however, serve any number of consecutive terms.

Ibsen Collection Shown in Library By Drama Head

In conjunction with Players' forthcoming production of Henrik Ibsen's "Hedda Gabler," a collection of maps and photographs relating to the life and works of Henrik Ibsen are on display in the Pattee Library.

Assembled by Arthur C. Cloetingh, head of the Dramatics department, the collection is on display in the second-floor exhibit cases of the library. In the collection are maps and photographs of Ibsen's native Norway, gathered by Cloetingh on a recent visit to that country. Photographs of other recent Penn State Ibsen production plays are in the collection.

"Hedda Gabler" will open at Center Stage Friday as part of the College observance of International Theater Month.

Ag Open House Date Set For May 22

The Ag school open house will be held May 22, Theodore Kimmel, open house committee chairman, announced last night at the Agriculture student council meeting.

Kimmel explained that May 22 was also a visiting day, sponsored by the Agriculture administration, and that the student-sponsored open house could parallel the faculty-sponsored day.

Paul Margolf, professor of poultry husbandry and council advisor, discussed the progress of the international relations program. Margolf suggested that some of the Ag clubs could better aid the project, which is sending modern farm equipment and seed as an experiment to Silliman College in the Philippine Islands, by donating materials and livestock that the club specializes in.

The committee for the proposed Ag-Home Ec square dance announced that the dance will be held in Recreation Hall, but could not take place until next year.

Debate Cup Is at Stake In Tourney

Penn State's temporary ownership of the state debate and forensic tournament trophy will be at stake this weekend, as five members of the College men's debate team travel to Lehigh University for another try at the championship cup.

The cup must be won three years in a row to become a permanent trophy. The men's team won it for the first time last year at Temple University.

David Swanson will take part in the oratorical contest. David Lewis will compete in the extemporaneous speaking contest.

Team Named Four rounds of debate have been scheduled, in addition to semi-final and final rounds.

Gene Kolber and Lewis will debate the affirmative. Robert Alderdice and Clair George, manager, will form the negative team.

Topic for the tournament will be the national intercollegiate debate question, "Resolved: That the federal government should adopt a permanent program of wage and price control."

Lewis is Veteran

Two weeks ago Lewis and Alderdice swept the Boston National Invitational Tournament with a total of eight wins and no losses.

Lewis is a two-year veteran of the state tournaments. Both years he participated in the oratorical contest, and in 1950, took second place. He was also on last year's affirmative team.

George debated negative with Marlin Brenner last year, and entered the finals in the extemporaneous speaking contest.

Coach Joseph O'Brien, of the Speech department, will accompany the team.

Infection Cases On Downgrade

The number of students affected by upper respiratory infection is growing smaller, according to Dr. Herbert R. Glenn, director of the College Health Service.

The respiratory infection usually is dominant only a week or ten days, Dr. Glenn said. It is a common occurrence each year and is not an epidemic, he added.

Only 23 students were received at the infirmary yesterday as compared to 33 at the same time last week, Dr. Glenn reported.

"The new cases," Dr. Glenn said, "are of less severity, and fevers are running lower."

Dr. Glenn also reported that there are a few cases of measles in the infirmary, but that most of these cases are from the Philadelphia area where there is an epidemic of measles.

by the local Inter-Religious Council. The theme was "This Meets Your Need."

The leaders for the week were Dr. Albert T. Mollegen, professor of Christian Ethics at the Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.; Dr. John Dillenberger, acting head of the Department of Religion, Columbia University; Rabbi Arthur J. Lelyveld, national director of Hillel Foundations; Dr. Andrew Tod Roy, personnel secretary of the board of foreign missions, Presbyterian Church, and Will Herberg, noted for his work in labor and social research, and theology.

Unify Knowledge

The theses of nearly all the discussions were the need for faith. Man's deepest need is to be met in the depths of his aloneness in which he must make the major decisions of life, Dr. Mollegen said, in the opening address.

At another time Dr. Mollegen pointed out that the purpose of education is to unify and integrate all the various kinds of knowledge offered students.

Purpose beyond self is the primary need of man because only by commitment to something higher than himself can man find a meaning for life, Rabbi Lelyveld maintained.

Faith Needed

Only a deep faith can give man the security he desires and permit him to make responsible use of freedom, Dr. Roy said.

Prophetic faith is the only thing that can give modern man the security which he needs to face the ever-changing problems of the world as challenges, Herberg said in Chapel last Sunday.

The dramatic presentation in Schwab Auditorium last Thursday represented three religious traditions, Christianity, Judaism, and Mohammedism, and their ways of worshipping God.

Fireside discussions and some classroom addresses gave students closer contact with the visiting leaders during the week.

The Rev. John Peabody, rector of St. Andrews Episcopal Church, was general chairman of RILW. Student co-chairmen were Jane Montgomery and Ralph Cash, with Milton Bernstein assisting in the absence of Cash after his graduation last January.
