We conducted a poll* of '41 graduates to find out:

HOW HAVE THEY MADE OUT IN 10 YEARS WITH GENERAL ELECTRIC?

Here are the results:

1. TRAINING. On the average, college graduates who came with General Electric in 1941 have taken between three and four Company-run training courses. Some have taken as many as seven. These have included courses in business management and accounting, in sales, manufacturing, and in many phases of engineering. Graduates report that this training has been a big help in furthering their careers. As one expressed it: "These courses are essential to certain fields of endeavor—so essential I am still signing up for additional courses."

Other comments: "These programs are not the purely academic ones of school days. They are practical, interesting, enable one to do a better job and enjoy it more." "The G-E Sales Training Program was definitely instrumental in helping me find my present position." "The training programs have been a very essential link between my college training and my present work." "I wish I could have known then how valuable these courses were going to be later." "They confirmed my original opinion that G.E. offered the best training for engineers."

2. EXPERIENCE. These graduates have had an average of three different rotating assignments in various phases of the Company's work. A typical example included assignments in radio test, in motors and generators, and in the industrial control development laboratory. Graduates express three main benefits derived from the G-E rotational job programs:

- a. They provided opportunities for deciding on a definite field of interest. Typical comment: "I didn't know what kind of work I wanted to do. Rotating assignments helped me make up my mind."
- b. They complemented college training with practical experience. "They helped me realize methods of manufacture and testing of different apparatus."
- c. They provided valuable associations and contacts. "Changing jobs five times brought me a variety of friends and contacts I'm still grateful for."

3. PROGRESS AND ADVANCEMENT. 88 per cent reported that they felt their progress in General Electric has been satisfactory. Nine per cent described their progress as "average, so-so," with three per cent reporting "unsatisfactory."

Comments: "It's been no Horatio Alger success story, but I feel pretty good about it." "If next 10 years have the same trend, will be very happy." "Satisfactory and entirely fair." "I don't know anyone on the outside who has done any better in the same time." "Satisfactory. I've been a G-E salesman, field engineer, and am now group leader in a G-E design engineering department." "I have felt like a kid in a candy store owned by his father. There are lots of choices and his only problem is to pick out what he likes best."
