

New Program On WMAJ Starts Tonight

Beginning at 9:15 tonight, WMAJ will present each Tuesday a 15-minute program entitled "More Information Please."

The purpose of the program is to get behind the headlines, and to bring about the realization of the significance in certain patterns in the news. The program also hopes to clarify various underlying facets according to David Mackey, assistant professor of Speech at the College, and one of nine on a committee which will meet weekly to decide the subject of the programs.

On tonight's presentation Leon Roudiez, instructor of Romance languages, will be interviewed by Mackey. The subject of the program will be the apparent defection of some of Gen. Charles DeGaulle's deputies in the National Assembly of France. Tied in with the discussion will be the question of German rearmament and French participation in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization which later may lead to a milestone in French politics.

Thomas --

expression of "bliss and suffering forever shared and forever all your own," Thomas said.

He chose not to speak of trends or to develop an over-all picture of modern poetry, since this is impossible because "only posterity can see the picture as a whole, and posterity will have to look out for itself," he said.

Thomas spoke of the ordinariness of the lives of most poets, and the refusal of the public to believe that a poet can lead a life no different from that of any other person.

Of his poems, and any other poems: "They are what they mean."

Unions --

known whether they would all support the union in a work stoppage.

The effect of a work stoppage among service employees is also open to speculation. The College refuses to discuss the question, but it is known that the union has a rather heavy hold over employees in the power plant and dining commons.

The union will meet Wednesday night in the Moose Hall to act on its motion of two weeks ago calling for the special meeting at this time "to set a date for a work stoppage."

Customs --

member of the newly formed freshman customs board.

As recommendations outside the proposal, council is suggesting that customs last only two weeks and that joint meetings of freshman men and women be held to learn songs and cheers.

In answer to the objections that the joint board would take away some of the power from WSGA, Janice Holm, council member, said:

"We are all Penn Staters and working on customs jointly will give freshmen a feeling of belonging. By working with the men, we can help with their enforcement of customs without losing anything ourselves. Two weeks of cooperating with the men will not ruin our government."
