Radio Program Offers Music, World Culture

Penn State students may hear music and comments on culture of various countries on Mondays at 9 p.m. over WMAJ when the Romance Languages department broadcasts its weekly show, "Music of the Nations."

Begun in the fall of 1950, the program features private record collections with commentaries about each record accompanying the selections.

Music which is a little off the beaten path is desired more than the popular music of the present day. An example of this is the time Renaissance lute music was played.

Although the program is sponsored by the Romance Language department with Irving Rothberg, assistant professor, as director, the music played is not restricted to that of the Romance countries.

Rothberg stressed that student collections are not the only ones used and that townspeople may also participate.

All-American Halts Summer Air Flights

Air passenger service to State College will not be available this summer, All-American Airways has announced.

The decision was announced by All-American President Robert M. Love in a letter to J. Alvin Hawbaker, who served as chairman of the Lions Club town meeting on the airport problem.

All-American will not use the State College air depot until year-round facilities are provided and it has definitely shelved any plans for utilizing the emergency field at Black Moshannon for a Centre County stop.

The airline has in the past provided service to State College residents during the summer months.

Continued inadequate and costly service at the Air Depot under a temporary setup is no longer desirable as far as All-American is concerned, and the Moshannon site is out of the picture because the Albert Field improvements are scheduled for completion this spring, the airlines' statement said.

Albert Field, between Clearfield and Philipsburg, is only 11 miles over improved roads from Black Moshannon.

It has been pointed out, Love said, "that if we would only give service for a short time longer, people would realize what they are missing."

But, he added, as long as All-American "hedges" on this problem "we will not only suffer expense, additional maintenance problems, and poor passenger reaction, but we probably will
