

All-College, Senior, Junior Posts Opened by State, Lion Parties

Lion Party Clique Fails to Nominate Class Candidates

Although nominations for All-College and junior and senior class officers were officially opened Sunday night by Ray Evert, chairman of the Lion Party, no nominations were made by the approximate 100 students in attendance.

The party held opening nominations for chairman of the freshman and sophomore class cliques at the meeting. Thomas Umholtz was the sole nominee for sophomore class clique chairman, while Norman Levin was the sole nominee for freshman class clique chairman.

Nominations To Close

The new Lion Party constitution requires that a new chairman from the freshman and sophomore classes be elected each spring. Closing nominations and elections for these offices will take place at next week's meeting.

Nominations for All-College and junior and senior class officers for the spring elections will be closed at next Sunday's meeting. Evert also announced that voting on the candidates will take place at that time.

Platform Begun

Sunday night's meeting was the last meeting for students to sign membership lists. If that was a student's first meeting, attending next Sunday's meeting will make a student eligible to vote in the party nominations, Evert announced. To be eligible to vote in the nominations, a person must have attended at least two clique meetings. This ruling is set up in the All-College elections code.

The Lion Party began work on its platform for the spring elections. At Sunday night's meeting, interested students were asked by Evert to sign up to work on the committee.

John Laubach, president of the Association of Independent Men, was nominated Sunday night as the State Party candidate for the office of All-College president in the approaching spring elections. No other nominations for that office were made at the meeting, which approximately 275 attended.

Other All-College nominations made Sunday were Howard Wright and Theodore Kimmel for vice president, and William Griffith for secretary-treasurer.

Three Nominated

James Plyler and Margaret Hepler were nominated for senior class president and secretary treasurer respectively.

In the junior class race, Richard Gibbs, Warren Haffner, and Richard Lemyre were nominated for the office of president. Lemyre declined the presidency nomination following his nomination for the position of vice president. Also nominated for vice president was William Wagner. Ann Quigley was nominated for the junior class secretary-treasurer post.

Further nominations and elections will be held at next Sunday's clique meeting. Nominating speeches are also scheduled to be made at that time.

Platform Suggestions

Thomas Farrell, clique chairman, pointed out that only those students who have attended at least one clique meeting would be eligible for admittance to the Sunday meeting. A ruling by the All-College elections committee holds that the party workshop meetings cannot be counted toward clique membership.

Farrell also requested that any suggestions for the party platform be given to Melvin Rubin or Joseph Simone, co-chairmen of the workshop platform committee. Jerome Feinburg and Corinne Janssens were appointed party co-historians by Farrell. Albert Lucidi was appointed chairman of a mixer to be held during the election campaign.

Gallant Galant Gleelessly Gulps Greek's Goldfish

In a throwback to the roaring 20's, Raymond Galant, eighth semester journalism senior, showed his fraternity brothers the technique of swallowing a goldfish.

Unlike the youth of the 20's, however, Galant didn't perform the deed as a stunt.

It all started when a fraternity brother, Norman Fleekop, offered Galant $5 to dispose of the fish, owned by another fraternity brother, Marvin Cotler.

After stripping down to the waist, Galant, surrounded by an anxious herd of fraternity brothers, lifted the fish to his mouth and consumed it along with a glass of water, as the fraters cheered.

"It was easier than I expected," Galant said after the experience. To prove that claim he has a standing offer to do it again" for $2.50."
