Thefts Increase On Big Weekends

With another big weekend coming up, fraternity men would do well to take every precaution to prevent a wave of thefts which marks almost each of these celebrations.

With fraternity houses open to all callers ... during big weekends, the occasion provides an opportunity for the amateur and professional thieves to reap a harvest. They make their way through the fraternities in an almost methodical way, picking up suits of clothing, golf clubs, watches, money and almost anything which isn't chained or nailed to the floor.

While these thefts are at their height during big weekends, a good many fraternities face the same problem—but on a smaller scale throughout the year. The dilemma is this: how to maintain the open house tradition of Penn State fraternities and at the same time put a halt to the thefts?

A large part of the thieving is concentrated along fraternity row on campus. The six campus fraternities being right in the center of social activity of the big weekends, cater to a large part of the party-hopping crowd. And they pay hard for their hospitality.

The losses by these six campus houses have been well over $300 on some weekends, while the average in others has been estimated at between $100 and $150 a week. Some of these houses have placed checkers on the doors in an attempt to curb the thefts. One house has moved its coat racks to the second floor in an attempt to make it more difficult for the thieves to operate.

Regardless what steps are taken, the point is that some caution should be exercised by fraternities. It is virtually impossible for this type of theft to be eliminated. Some sensible precautions, however, can help cut down on the losses.

April Fool

Today is April Fool's Day, an old American tradition. Today is the day for our practical joker friends to play games. We expect to find shaving cream in our tooth paste, crumbs in our bed, pepper in our pillow.

to find that the Daily even awake Collegian has been printed upside down or sideways, the masthead containing the name of Joe Stalin, a headline disclosing fantastic fraud in the College administration.

On any other day of the year we would write dirty notes to members of the staff responsible for these acts. But should these things happen in today's paper, we would be forced to accept them in the spirit of the day.

We learn wisdom from failure much more than from success.—Smiles

Student 'Shocked' at Amateur Goldfish Swallower at College

TO THE EDITOR: I was shocked when I read the article "Gallant Galant Gleefully Gulps Greek's Goldfish" in the March 25 Collegian. This guy is a phony. I hope our fearless Mr. Galant learns the correct technique of swallowing goldfish before he puts on question and lowing goldfish before he puts on another command performance.

I belong to two national goldfish swallowing clubs, one at 100 Keswick road, Buffalo 21, N.Y., and the other, which I joined last summer, at 149th street and S. Western avenue, Los Angeles, Calif.
Why do I say Galant is a phony?

1. Because a true Goldfish swallower never takes money for doing the same. It is a sin

2. Because according to the article he lifted the fish to his mouth with his hands. This is also against the rules of any goldfish club.

3. Because he "consumed it along with a glass of water." Goldfish are correctly placed in a draught of beer and thus swallowed with the goldfish trying to swim upstream.

That is why I say he is a phony. And what is this business of stripping down to the waist. Big deal—rah rah. I suppose his fraternity brothers had a brass hand playing for him also. brothers had a brass band playing for him also. I only feel sorry for the goldfish being swallowed by such an amateur. —Charles Miller

Senate Ruling Called 'Inane' By Irate Collegian Reader

TO THE EDITOR: Of all the utterly inane rulings committees are capable of promulgating, the most noteworthy is the recent edict of the Senate committee on athletics by ruling that only Eastern titlists be entered in NCAA com-

Yesterday's (March 25) Daily Collegian editorial and "Lion's Lair" quite lucidly illustrated the shortcomings of the ruling. I, and others of the students body, can merely echo that protest.

We, as proud representatives of the Pennsylvania State College, must not only plead, we must demand justifiable recognition be granted our teams in national competition.

The ruling is shallow and thoughtless, its cause obscure and undefined.

If the move is part of a program of deemphasization of athletics, it is sheer hypocrisy. If it is necessitated by an inadequacy of financial support, it must be remedied, and if it is merely hindsightedness on the part of the Senate committee on athletics . . . it is truly tragic.

The time is now!
