

Trustees Promote Eight, Appoint Four to Faculty

Appointments of four new faculty members, promotions of eight faculty members, and three leaves of absences for professors were approved at the weekend meeting of the College Board of Trustees, President Milton S. Eisenhower has announced. The board also accepted the resignations of six faculty members.

April 25-26 Speakers Announced

Gove Hambidge of Washington, D.C., regional representative of the director general of the Food and Agricultural Organization of North America, will be the featured speaker at the annual Spring weekend to be held April 25 and 26, Dr. Grace Henderson, Dean of the School of Home Economics, announced today.

Hambidge will speak in Schwab Auditorium at 4 p.m. April 25. All exhibits in the Home Economics Building will be closed from 4 to 5 p.m. that day.

"Bread and Peace" is the subject Hambidge chose when asked to speak on the importance of food in determining world policy, in keeping with theme of the weekend which is "Food and People."

Hambidge has been active in the Food and Agricultural Organization since its beginning as the first of the specialized United Nations organizations created after the war. He has been a writer for the United States Department of Agriculture for many years and is the author of several books, including "Your Meals and Your Money," "Six Rooms Make a World," and "Prime of Life."

Mary E. Sweeney, former head and now consultant of the Department of Physical Growth and Development at the Merrill-Palmer School in Detroit, will deliver the main address at the School of Home Economics annual alumni dinner. Her topic will be "Our Part in the World's Food Problem." Miss Sweeney has had many years of experience as a child nutrition specialist.

Faculty Ticket Plan Introduced

The Athletic Association has introduced a "budget plan" as an incentive for faculty and staff members to purchase season football tickets.

The new plan offers purchasers the opportunity to spread ticket payments over a four-month period. The plan was outlined in a letter to employees.

Individual season tickets that will entitle the purchaser to the same seat for five home games are priced $12, tax included. This price represents, in effect, a saving of $6 per season, the letter said. There is a limit of two tickets to each qualified purchaser.

A $5 deposit for each ticket is required with the application for the ticket. The balance is to be paid no later than Aug. 15.

Andersen's Thesis Play To Open in Little Theater

"Rosmersholm," Richard Andersen's master's thesis production, will be staged at 7:30 tonight and tomorrow night at Little Theater, basement of Old Main. Free tickets are available in the dramatics office on the second floor of Schwab Auditorium.

Dean's List Addition

Joan Kanyunk was named to the dean's list for the fall semester with an average of 2.64, the School of Home Economics has announced.

Miss Kanyunk's name was accidentally omitted from a list previously published.

College Will Host Intercollegiate Band Festival

The College will be host to the fifth annual Collegiate Band Festival, April 17 to 19, James W. Dunlop, associate professor of music education, has announced.

Twenty-three members of the Penn State Blue Band will be among the 123 students from 23 colleges who have been chosen to participate in the festival.

The program includes registration and first rehearsal Thursday, April 17, with other practices scheduled for Friday and Saturday. The band will present a concert Saturday night in Recreation Hall.

Reluctant Dancer Holds Down 3 Jobs in Thespians' 'Yankee'

By BETTIE LOUX

For a girl who "didn't like dancing" and had to be bribed to take lessons at the age of three and a half, nimble Michaline "Mike" Claysmith has come a long way.

She is tripping the light fantastic in the samba number in Thespians' "A Connecticut Yankee," which opens tomorrow night in Schwab Auditorium. But that isn't all.

Mike's major job in the Rodgers and Hart musical comedy is that of choreographer, which means that four original dance routines—as lively as her toes—had their origin in her ingenious brain. In addition, for the past couple months Mike, as dance director, has been holding nightly workouts with her 20 proteges.

Mike admits it's not the easiest thing in the world, for one brunette dancer can't work well with a partner and keep a weather eye out for the other dancers' slips simultaneously. It amounts to being upon the stage and in the audience at the same time, she says.

But now Mike "loves it" all, and expects to be feeling a little on the sentimental side Saturday night when the curtain goes down on her sixth and last Thespian show.

Finding it next to impossible to state her favorite number, she says that, from the sophisticated "My Night to Howl" to the breezy "I Feel at Home with You," they're all different and have a style of their own. Partly for that reason she feels they will contribute to the success of the show, which should be the "best Thespians have done in a long time."

Her first appearance on the

Michaline Claysmith

Schwab stage was a calypso duet with Harry Woollever in "Welcome Willy" two years ago. Woollever, former Thespian choreographer who is now working toward a dancing career in New York, noticed the dark-haired sophomore during auditions. When he asked her if she would care to be his partner, she "floated home," she says.

From that show on the two did a lot of work together and were seen in "Some Punkins" last year in both the voodoo dance and Esmeralde number.

Mike had her first chance at choreography last fall in "Bottoms Up" and as a result was asked to stage the dances for "Connecticut Yankee." "At first I was completely stumped," she says, but after thinking about it in classes and drawing from basic steps it all began to fall into place.

After graduation, however, dancing will probably become an avocation for Mike, who is majoring in child development and "would like to do social work." Although she finds it hard to turn her back on the professional stage, two things stand in her way—her age and the keenness of competition, she says.

While a senior in high school Mike won a dancing part with the Pitt Civic Light Opera, but had to turn it down because it would have conflicted with the senior class play, in which she had a leading role.

One of her happiest memories is the time she "danced before royalty—almost," a group of ambassadors and statesmen at a Polish convention in Pittsburgh.

Forestry Professor To Retire

Victor A. Beede, head of the Forestry department, will retire with emeritus rank on June 30.

His retirement was one of 15 retirements announced yesterday by President Milton S. Eisenhower. They were approved at the weekend meeting of the executive committee of the College Board of Trustees.

Beede, professor of forest management, will be succeeded as head of the Department of Forestry by Maurice K. Goddard, professor of forestry and director of the Mont Alto branch of the Pennsylvania State Forest School.

J. Martin Fry, vice dean and director of agriculture and home economics extension, will retire June 30 with emeritus rank after 35 years of extension work on the College staff.

Fry began extension work in 1917, handling fair exhibits and publicity for the extension services. A year later he was appointed first county agent for Northumberland County. He was named assistant to the director of agricultural and home economics extension in 1924, and in 1942 was named to his present position.

Retirements with emeritus rank on June 30 were also approved for MacClean M. Babcock, professor of industrial engineering, appointed to the faculty in 1916; Dr. Walter H. Pielemeier, professor of physics, who has served on the faculty since 1920; Dr. James E. Gillespie, professor of European history, named to the faculty in 1922; Julius E. Kauffuss, professor of highway engineering, named to the faculty in 1924; Mary Jane Wyand, professor of education since 1927; and Dr. Clarence S. Anderson, professor of agricultural education.

The trustees also approved the retirements, effective June 30, of Howard C. McWilliams and Lloyd P. Engle, county agricultural extension representatives. Both have served the College since 1915.

Other retirements announced include Marion S. McDowell, associate professor of family relationships, a faculty member since 1928, effective June 30; Randolph H. Thompson, associate professor of wildlife management extension since 1947, effective Aug. 31; and Joseph S. Knapper, associate professor of chemistry in central extension, who has been on the faculty since 1942, effective June 30.

Constantine Auroroff, instructor in Russian since 1939, and Elizabeth D. Reynolds, instructor in music since 1944, will also retire June 30.
