

Steel Shutdown Almost Certain

PITTSBURGH, April 7—(P)—Steel production sagged today and the number of laid off mill workers rose sharply as the industry speeded up the shutdown process it must finish before tomorrow midnight when 700,000 CIO United Steelworkers are slated to strike.

Since it takes up to 96 hours to cool off the iron and steel making furnaces without damage, the basic steel producing companies began the shutdown procedure rather leisurely during the weekend and it gathered momentum today.

Maintenance to Stay On
By the time day shifts knocked off, about 50,000 steelworkers were furloughed over the country for the duration of the strike threat emergency. That figure will zoom into the hundreds of thousands within hours as more and more companies approach the end of the shutdown process.

Murray Requests Order
Also idled by the strike threat are nearly 10,000 coal miners who work in "captive mines." Those are pits—owned by steel companies—whose production does not reach the market but is used in the steelmaking process.

President Philip Murray of both the CIO and the CIO United Steelworkers has notified every local union to conduct an orderly, peaceful strike. He also directed locals to permit maintenance men to work unhampered in the mills.

Sixteen students have reported that they would be available for work during the Easter vacation. Most of these have been placed and three have full-time employment during Easter vacation, the office reported.
