

Freedom, Power Criteria In Election--Farrington

"The yardsticks by which to judge the issues in this year's presidential election are the preservation of American freedom and the stoppage of concentration of power in the executive branch," Mrs. Joseph Farrington, president of the National Federation of Women's Republican Clubs, said last night.

Mrs. Farrington spoke at a banquet which was part of the four-day Eastern Intercollegiate Association of Women Student's convention ending today. One hundred thirty-eight delegates from 57 colleges are attending the convention.

In order to make each individual's influence felt, the wife of the Hawaiian delegate to Congress suggested a rededication to the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution, and the Bill of Rights; the exercise of the franchise; and the voicing of approval or disgust of government policy by letters and telegrams.

Workshop Planned

In the final phase of the convention, Betty Richardson will be toastmistress at a breakfast 8 a.m. today at the Allencrest Tea Room. Sponsored by Cwens, Chimes, and Mortar Board, women's honoraries, the breakfast will honor delegates who are members of any sophomore honorary, Chimes, or Mortar Board. Mary Jane Woodrow, Women's Student Government Association and EIAWS president, will lead a workshop on the war emergency at 9 a.m. in McElwain Hall lounge.

Miller to Officiate

A discussion on educational integration in Simmons Hall lounge and one on career and/or marriage in Atherton hall southeast lounge will be held at 9 a.m.

Virginia Miller, co-chairman of the convention, will preside at the final sessions at 10:15 a.m. in 405 Old Main.

Delegates will eat lunch in the College dining halls and see the final Olympic tryouts tonight in Recreation Hall.

President Milton S. Eisenhower told the delegates at a luncheon Thursday that development of world understanding among individuals was a step toward long range peace. He cited language barriers, differences in concepts, political censorship, and propaganda as impediments to world peace.

WSGA Officers Preside

Economics co-operation, multi-lateral political negotiations, and an agency to enforce peace, are needed for long-term peace, while power can be used in the emergency program to prevent aggression, the President said.

WSGA officers Miss Woodrow, Miss Miller, secretary, and Carolyn Pelczar, treasurer, are regional officers for the convention. Joan Hutchon, president-elect, and Barbara Wertz, vice president-elect, are the College's delegates to the convention. Miss Miller and JoAn Lee are co-chairmen for the convention.

The headquarters of the American Lutheran Church is in Columbus, Ohio.
