The He-Man contestants will run from the corner of College avenue and Allen street to the front of the Mineral Industries building, following a College avenue, Shortlidge road, and Pollock road route. Contestants will be divided into several groups, and the winners of each of these groups will participate in the finals to be held on the lacrosse field after the parade. The number of groups and the number from each group to participate in the finals have not yet been determined.

He-Man contestants who cross the finish line in front of the Mineral Industries building will earn 75 points for their sponsors. Events in the lacrosse field finals will be held in "a real festival spirit," Geffert said. The contestant who completes the lacrosse field exercises in the shortest time will be declared All-College He-Man. He will reign with Miss Penn State over the Spring Week activities. Miss Penn State will be crowned Monday night in Schwab Auditorium.

The 49 He-Man contestants chose numbers at a meeting Wednesday night. They will wear these numbers during the contest Tuesday.

Medical School Exams

Medical college entrance examinations will be given from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. tomorrow in 109 Agriculture.

Dairy Judging Contest To Open 27th Exposition

The annual Milk and Ice Cream Judging Contest will be held at 10 this morning in the Dairy Building. The contest is in conjunction with the 27th annual Dairy Exposition to be held tomorrow afternoon in the Livestock Pavilion.

The contest, which is sponsored by the Dairy Science Club, will consist of the judging of eight samples of milk and eight of ice cream. Forty minutes is allowed for the judging of the products.

Two groups, professional and amateur will be competing in the contest. The professional group will be made up of all students who have had or are taking dairy husbandry 4, while the amateur classification will cover all others wishing to participate. No admission fee will be charged.

Prizes for the judging contest, which include $50 in cash, medals, cups, subscriptions to dairy magazines, and a wrist watch, will be awarded at a banquet tomorrow night. Leaders in the dairy industry and members of commercial firms will present awards to the winners of the products judging contest and other contests held as part of the Dairy Exposition.

Other features of the Dairy Exposition which will take place tomorrow are a sheep dog demonstration and a professors' milking contest. The sheep dog demonstration will be given by Carroll S. Schaffner, College shepherd and nationally famous sheep dog trainer. Four professors, winners of the last three years and a challenger, will compete in the milking contest.

Over 2000 visitors are expected to attend the Dairy Exposition, which is open to all students free of charge. The show tomorrow will begin at 12:30 p.m. and continue until 5:30 p.m. The main program will consist of the showing and fitting of five classes of livestock.

Players --

with those below his station in life. Complications and fun begin when he takes the squire's home to be an inn, the squire an innkeeper, and his daughter, a barmaid of few scruples.

Players snicker inwardly at the ridiculous set-up designed to satirize the stylized 18th century comedy at the same time they are laughing at each other. In return the audience howls right back.

Several excellent characterizations mark Players' final production of the season, namely in the persons of Robert D. Reifsnider, who plays the kindly Squire Hardcastle; Steven Malin, seen as the roughish Tony; Jeannie Risler, as Mrs. Hardcastle; and Kathryn Scheetz, the spirited daughter who stoops to the role of bar-maid to loosen the tongue of her prospective husband and conquer him.

Why it is human to find mirth in the discomforts of others we don't know, but Kaye Vinson's stammering, stilted interview with Kate is one of the most hilarious scenes in the show.

Lee Stern, George Jason and Albert Kalson, as the squire's three ridiculous servants, are riotous as they practice their manners in preparation for Marlowe's arrival. It is only wished that they appeared more often.

Director Walter H. Walters has cast his supporting players well, for good performances were turned in by Constance Melvin as Miss Neville; Arch Rugh as Hastings, and the rest of the large cast in general.

The settings, designed by Dr. Walters, live up to Players' standard of high quality. The painted candelabra was quite well done, but a cardboard cupid of most florid complexion in the garden scene is a little disturbing.

Elaborate costuming also contributed to the good production.
