

Golfers Meet East's Best at Annapolis Today

Yale Bulldogs Rated Favorites To Capture 1952 EIGA Title

By TED SOENS

The only undefeated team on campus, the Nittany Lion golfers, will be out to gain added experience today and tomorrow as they face the East's top college golfers at Annapolis, Md.

The Yale Bulldogs, defending champs, are rated the favorites to capture the team title in the 1952 Eastern Intercollegiate golf tournament.

Their top man and probably one of the best in the nation today, Link Roden, will also be defending his title as the best college golfer in the East.

Starting at 8 a.m. today, 96 golfers will play 36 holes of golf to decide the team champion, while tomorrow only 16 of these men will play for the individual title.

Only One Veteran

For State the golfers will be Rod Eaken, Hud Samson, Gordon Stroup, Joe Webb, George Kreidler, and Warren Gittlen.

With the exception of Samson, State will be fielding five men who haven't played in College competition prior to this year.

And all of these men will be expected to play on next year's team. The veteran of the squad, Samson, is a junior; Eaken, the number one man, is a sophomore; Webb, medalist against Pitt, is also a sophomore; Stroup, a transfer student from Juniata, is a junior; the other members of the squad, Gittlen, and Kreidler, are freshmen.

Pitt was Undefeated

As a consequence of this inexperience, Coach Bob Rutherford's team was rated a "green team" and wasn't expected to do so well this season. But so far they've won their first two matches, defeating Cornell and Pitt by the same scores, 5-2.

The Pitt victory, especially, was a sweet one. Pitt had been undefeated before they met the Lions, and was heavily rated to defeat State. Incidentally, Pitt has a very good golfer in Bob Riley who is expected to show up well in the EIGA tourney.

After the tournament the golfers have only two more weeks before their season is over. They will be playing two home matches next week, one on Thursday against Bucknell, and the other on Saturday with the Navy. They'll wind up the year with a match with Colgate's Red Raiders on May 24.

Sports Thru The Lion's Eye

Legend has it that in Holland they strap ice skates on a kid before he can walk. Down Maryland way, U.S.A., they shove a lacrosse stick into a kid's mitts before he learns to manipulate a dripping popsicle stick. This too may be simply legendary among Marylanders, but they certainly wasted no time in acquainting Penn State's Harold "Bud" Wolfram with the facts of Maryland life.

The diminutive captain of the Nittany lacrosse team was wielding a big stick at the age of seven in his Towson, Maryland, home town.

Living in suburban Baltimore, the geographic center of the lacrosse world, Bud was exposed to a tremendous lacrosse environment. (Lacrosse is so much the rave in Maryland that the college games outdraw baseball's triple-A Baltimore Orioles on weekends.)

Bud got his first coaching in the skull-busting industry at Baltimore Polytechnic high school where he played on the varsity his junior and senior years. With college on deck for Bud, Penn State had a lucky legacy—his sister graduated from State in 1946.

During his last three seasons on the lacrosse ten, Bud has played a prominent role for Nittany Coach Nick Thiel. The ubiquitous midfielder has been more than conspicuous leading the Lions' switches from attack to defense and back to attack.

Bud, a tiny mite standing only 67 inches from the ground and weighing 125 pounds, has stood up surprisingly well for his lack of stature and avoirdupois. Despite the pounding he has taken, Bud had never been injured seriously until last week in the Syracuse game when he stretched a tendon which will probably limit his action to one or two quarters today.

Hustling Bud, modest and unassuming about his own prowess, recalls his happiest day in lacrosse as the one last May when Penn State stunningly upset the crackerjack Maryland Lacrosse Club—a 7-6 victory which was a brilliant team performance so characteristic of Wolfram.

New Warren Coach

WARREN, Pa. (AP)—C. Frederick Bell, former Penn State athlete who has coached the high school football team at his hometown of Bellefonte the past three seasons, has been named new head football coach at Warren. He succeeds J. B. Laidig who will continue as Warren's athletic director.

J. Paul Sheedy* Switched to Wildroot Cream-Oil Because He Flunked The Finger-Nail Test

"YOUR HAIR looks as though it's been in the rein, deer," a campus Caribou told Sheedy. "If you want to horn in on the sororities, it might behoof a man of your ilk to try Wildroot Cream-Oil, America's Favorite Hair Tonic. Contains soothing Lanolin. Non-alcoholic. Grooms hair neatly and naturally all day long. Relieves annoying dryness. Removes moose, ugly dandruff. Helps you pass the Finger-Nail Test!" Paul got Wildroot Cream-Oil and now no girl wonders whether he's man or moose! If your moose is cooked by unruly hair, collect a little doe and take a taxi-dermist to the nearest drug or toilet goods counter for a bottle or tube of Wildroot Cream-Oil. And ask for it on your hair at the barber shop so your deer won't think you've let herd down. (What she'll say will be moose-ic to your ears!)

Attendance Hurt by TV

NEW YORK, May 8 (AP)—Television hurts college football attendance—badly.

This conclusion, along with several others, was reached through a year-long study made, at a cost of $50,000, by the National Opinion Research Center of the University of Chicago for the National Collegiate A.A.

The NORC report, embodied in a 30-page booklet replete with graphs and statistical tables, was released today after the NCAA Television Committee ended a two-day meeting to plan for a 1952 program of controlled television.

Other conclusions reached were: "Attendance is particularly off in those 'heavily saturated' TV areas where 40 per cent or more of the families are set-owners.

"The NCAA's 1951 experimental plan of limiting telecasting of college games succeeded in reducing television's harmful effects on attendance. In 1950 . . . the difference between the relative attendance trends of colleges exposed to television competition and those not exposed was significantly greater than it was in 1951."

Challenging previous studies, which seemed to indicate that television had only a temporary effect on attendance and might in the long run prove beneficial, the NORC study indicates a steady decline in attendance coinciding with the growth of television.
