

Campus Project to Get Future Chapel Offerings

The general category of a campus project received the greatest number of votes collected Sunday in Chapel to help determine the future use of Chapel offerings, Wilmer E. Kenworthy, director of student affairs, said yesterday.

Kenworthy, who is also a member of the committee studying the possible use of future Chapel offerings, said the campus project received 267 of the 563 ballots cast. He added that this was 47.5 per cent of the total.

Four Profs Publish Articles

Four professors in the Romance Language department have had articles published in current magazines.

The Suddentsche Zeitung, a periodical published in Munich, Germany, recently printed "The Oldest Poetry in Europe," an article by Francisco Echebarria, a visiting instructor in Spanish. The article shows that Spain is the first country, even before the Provencals, to create Romance poetry.

In the April issue of Modern Language Notes, Leon S. Roudiez, assistant professor, has had published a newly discovered letter of the French poet, Charles Baudelaire. The letter expresses Baudelaire's feelings of frustration and helplessness over a quarrel with Eugene Crepet.

Dr. Laurence LeSage, associate professor, has an article titled "Prost and Gide" in the current issue of the Modern Language Journal. His review on a translation of Verlaine's "Confessions" is in the current issue of Modern Language Forum.

Two book reviews published by Gerald M. Moser, assistant professor, appear in the spring issue of Books Abroad.

Dr. O. H. Aurand, professor of education, served with an education consultant group at the first Pennsylvania Regional Planning Conference which was held Friday, May 16. Aurand is executive secretary of the Pennsylvania School Study Council.

Decision to Come in Fall

Kenworthy said that these results do not provide the final answer. However, he added, they will be used as a guide for those who will make the final decision.

The final decision, he said, probably will not be known until the College opens in the Fall. Kenworthy said that the proposals would be studied during the summer months.

The categories were chosen instead of specific projects because, in the case of foreign projects, other American institutions were considering sending aid to foreign schools.

Projects Include Chapel

The ballots were included in folders containing sample projects under the general categories. A brief description was included in the folder of each of the proposed projects.

Proposed campus projects included an international house or center at the College, a campus chapel, and a scholarship for a foreign student.

Foreign projects proposed included the Allahabad Agricultural Institute, Silliman University, and the World Student Service Fund. The WSSF is interested in several foreign schools.

FMA to Operate Next Semester

The Fraternity Management Association definitely will go into action next fall, William Hafley, chairman of the committee announced yesterday.

The association offers savings to fraternities on food budgets amounting to as high as 18 percent, Hafley said. This is possible through large scale buying on the part of several fraternities through one dealer.

FMA is currently taking a poll among the fraternities to determine the amounts and brands of food used each month. Results of this poll will be used as a basis for buying next fall.

Response has been fairly satisfactory, Hafley said. He urged other fraternities to return the questionnaires as soon as possible. Due to the poor response and finals, there will be no more association meetings this semester, he added.

Fraternities indicating an interest in the plan will be notified this summer as to delivery date for food and other details of the plan.

Delegates Jailed In Beaver Field

Two delegates to the Federal Tax Institute, held last week at the Nittany Lion Inn, spent an unscheduled hour and a half locked in Beaver Field.

The two men decided to tour the campus after the conference and entered the field about 8:30 p.m. last Wednesday. When they returned to the gate it was locked and there was no one in sight to release them.

A student drove by, saw the two men, and reported them to the Campus Patrol. The embarrassed men were released by the Patrol about 10 p.m. They would not give their names.

Students Study Rural Schools

The junior elementary education block in the charge of Harry N. Gasser, instructor in elementary education, has had a varied program of special speakers and observations at rural and community schools within the past eight weeks.

The class has visited schools at Spring Township and Patton Township. They also spent a day observing at several schools in York. Special events included the Boalsburg School Field Day and the Stormstown Parent-Teachers Association meeting.

The class has completed an assignment on investigation of community projects, such as the Red Cross, Girl Scouts, Community Welfare organization, church groups, and school health and transportation programs.

The object of these varied activities is to acquaint the students with different aspects of all-round professional teachers.

Flash Card Seating Signup Continues

Students who wish to sit in a special placard display section of Beaver Field during football games next semester may sign up at the Student Union desk in Old Main. All students who are returning next semester may sign up for the section.

Registration for the preferential seating section began yesterday, when 24 signed up, according to the Student Union office. Next year's seniors will have first choice for the seats, which are between the 40- and 30-yard lines, if more than 750 sign up. That is the number estimated as enough to fill the special placard area.

Provide Group Seating

The plan for the preferential seating was approved by All-College Cabinet at its meeting Thursday. James Wharton, chairman of the preferential seating committee, announced last week that the registration for the section would begin Monday.

In explaining the placard plan, Wharton said that students who sign up will be given athletic books which will admit them to the special section rather than the regular class sections.

Although individual seats will probably be assigned to those who sign up, plans have been made to allow those who wish to sit together to do so. The seats will not be assigned until next fall.

To Operate Cards

Of the 24 students who signed up at the Student Union desk yesterday, nine were next-semester seniors, four were juniors, and 11 were sophomores. Registration will continue for an indefinite period, or until the seating section is filled.

Students sitting in the section will be expected to cooperate in the operation of the flashcard system. This is the purpose of the section, and only those who expect to work the flashcards should sign up for the section. Those who do not cooperate will have their special AA passbooks exchanged for regular books.

The board also extended the military leave of Dr. Alexander H. Zerban, professor of mechanical engineering, from July 1, to June 30, 1953.
