

5 Music Groups Open for Talent

Students with vocal or instrumental training will find at the College five musical organizations which use tryouts as the basis for membership.

The Penn State Blue Band is composed of two units. The marching unit, all men, which plays at outdoor events such as football games is composed of about 100 musicians and is active only during the first semester. It marches at a record 170 steps per minute, one of the fastest in the country.

The Concert Blue Band is composed of about 90 men and women students and presents concerts during both semesters. Members receive one college credit for the second semester's work.

Tryouts for the Concert and Marching Blue Band will be held Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday in 109 Carnegie Hall. Interested students should sign up in advance for tryout appointments.

The Symphony Orchestra is a male and female organization which presents several programs during the year, featuring pre-classical through modern music. One credit per semester is given for tryouts.

Tryouts will be held Tuesday, for symphony orchestra work.

Wednesday, and Thursday in Carnegie Hall. Those interested may sign up in advance in 109 Carnegie Hall.

The Chapel Choir is a mixed group of about 120 students which presents programs at the weekly chapel services. Two hours of rehearsal are held each week and one credit is given per semester. Tryouts will be held by arrangement in 216 Carnegie Hall Wednesday or Thursday.

Two other vocal musical groups are organized on the campus. One is the Penn State Glee Club, an all-male group which presents several concerts and makes a spring tour each year. Tryouts will be held by appointments that may be made early in the week in 216 Carnegie Hall.

The second vocal group is the Treble Singers, a women's choral group of about 130 members. The group rehearses from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Wednesdays. Tryouts will be given through appointments which may be made in 216 Carnegie Hall.

Outstanding music majors and others active in music are eligible for the Louise Homer Club, women's music honorary. There are about 30 members. The groups selects its members in the fall.

Members of the group assist with musical activities, usher at concerts, and work with Phi Mu Alpha, men's music honorary, to promote more interest in music.

Members of Phi Mu Alpha are chosen from those outstanding in some musical activity.

The group gives jazz concerts, dances, sponsors a program over WMAJ, and takes part in various musical events. Those interested in joining must fill out applications. They will be rushed and voted on as in other honorary groups.

We who are your student government officers intend to do you in any way possible to aid to Penn State. The busier we the better we like it because found out some time ago what a student gets out of Penn State depends to a large degree on what he puts into it. I all pitch in and make this one of the greatest years ever.
