

Campus Patrol Predicts Sufficient Parking Room

At the present rate of automobile registration there will be enough parking spaces on campus for students who are eligible for parking permits under present plans, Capt. Philip A. Mark of Campus Patrol said yesterday.

Faculty members and College employees have been issued permits for parking areas reasonably near their offices according to a quota plan set up during the summer.

PSCA Plans International Discussions

Freshmen and new students may get their formal introduction to the Penn State Christian Association and old members may renew membership at its first meeting at 7 p.m. Sept. 17 in 304 Old Main.

Luther Harshbarger, executive secretary, will open a short series of discussions entitled "International Acquaintance" by speaking of his most recent trip to Europe. The second meeting of this series will be held Sept. 24 and will be a report on the Olympic Games by R. B. Patrick, C. D. Werner, and Eugene Wettstone, all of the Physical Education department.

Sponsors Programs
The PSCA is the extension of the Young Men and Young Women's Christian Association on campus.

Programs sponsored by the PSCA include fireside discussion groups in faculty homes; Bible study; theology discussion group; four study commissions in the areas of personal and campus affairs, social responsibility, Christian faith and heritage, and world relatedness, cabin parties, and intercollegiate conferences.

Cabin parties are held in Ralph Watts Lodge which is the PSCA cabin located four miles from campus just above Shingletown Gap. It is placed on a 39-acre plot of timberland overlooking the Nittany Valley.

Two Governing Bodies
These parties are planned each weekend by the PSCA or by other campus or town organizations. Chaperons are approved by the Dean of Women's office for mixed parties.

The two governing bodies of the PSCA include the student cabinet consisting of the executive committee, coordination committee, and chairmen of the various program committees, and the Board of Directors, which consists of faculty, students, alumni, and townspeople.

The student cabinet is responsible for the planning and execution of the student program as a whole, while the Board of Directors assumes final responsibility for all policy.

Finances are provided by the students themselves through the Campus Chest. In addition to these funds, PSCA members carry on a number of projects such as an old fashioned auction, the operation of a local clothing store, a square dance, and a few concerts.

Any College student operating an automobile on campus during the year is required to register it during registration in Recreation Hall.

Parking permits are being issued to commuting students, students who live in College dormitories, and physically handicapped students. Commuting students are those living outside of the borough line or south of Irwin avenue. Physically handicapped students must obtain a certificate from the College Health Service recommending that they be issued a permit.

Convenience Sought
Permits are being distributed from 320 Old Main.

Captain Mark said that in some cases parking permits cannot be issued for the most convenient parking lot for the student but that permits for areas reasonably convenient are being given.

A folder containing all campus parking and traffic regulations, a map of the campus showing parking areas in red and their numbers, and a map designating the area of State College whose residents will not be considered as commuting students is given to each student receiving a permit.

Shortlidge Widened
A new 220-car parking area has been opened this semester between Hort Woods and Beaver Field. It has entrances across from the Pattee Library and on Park avenue.

Shortlidge road has been widened in front of Simmons and McElwain Halls, and a new entrance from U.S. Route 322 was constructed during the summer.

Among the regulations is one requiring roadside parking to be only in the direction of traffic.

Captain Mark said that after the parking situation has been settled, surveys will be taken to determine the extent to which each of the parking areas is being used. If the survey shows that in certain areas there are vacant spaces at all times of the day, additional permits will be issued for these areas. In this event, the line differentiating commuters from non-commuters will be brought closer to campus.

Hort Head Dies in Hospital

Dr. Warren B. Mack, professor and head of the horticulture department at the College, died July 6 in Urological Hospital, Philadelphia, where he had been a patient for two months. He was 56.

Dr. Mack who had been a member of the College faculty since 1923, had planned to retire Aug. 31. The Board of Trustees last June approved his retirement with emeritus rank.

Born Jan. 18, 1896, in Northampton County, Dr. Mack was married in 1923 to Pauline G. Beery, who served on the faculty from 1919 until her resignation last June as professor of household chemistry and director of the Ellen G. Richards Institute at the College. She is now dean of the newly-created College of Household Arts and Sciences of the Texas State College for Women at Denton, Texas.

Mack was graduated from Lafayette College with first honors at the age of 19. In 1946 Lafayette awarded him an honorary doctor of science degree.

Dr. Mack enrolled at Penn State in 1919 and received his B. S. degree in horticulture in 1921. He earned his M. S. at Massachusetts Agricultural College, now the University of Massachusetts in 1924, and a Ph.D. degree in plant physiology from Johns Hopkins University in 1929.

In 1921, Dr. Mack was named instructor in pomology at Massachusetts Agricultural College. He returned to the College in 1923 as instructor in horticulture, and was named assistant professor of vegetable gardening the next year. He was promoted to associate professor in 1926, and professor of vegetable gardening in 1930. He was named head of the Department of Horticulture in 1937.

Fraternity Pledging To Begin Tomorrow

Pledging in Penn State fraternities will begin at 8 a.m. tomorrow, 48 hours before classes begin, as required by Interfraternity Council rules.

The 50 fraternities began fall rushing Monday under the handicap of having only about 400 men students eligible for rushing transferred to the campus.

According to the Dean of Men's office, numerous fraternities have vacancies, but most say they expect to fill them. Many new pledges will be secured from the house guests now living at the houses during Orientation Week.

Second semester freshmen who were on campus last year are permitted to pledge under IFC rulings, but second semester students who came to the College from other schools or Penn State centers may not be pledged. Freshmen who attended summer sessions at the College, but have not completed one semester, may not pledge. Any upperclassman may pledge.

Must Send Lists
Rushes may live in fraternities upon invitation as house guests, but cannot break dorm contracts to live there during pledgship.

The Dean of Men's office announced that for exchanges between the fraternity and the College, the fraternity should submit two lists to the dean's office containing (1) names of men desiring to transfer to dormitories, and (2) names and room addresses of men living in dormitories who desire to be released to transfer to the fraternity.

Freshmen living in the West Dorms cannot break their room contracts with the College, which are binding for one year.

Average Needed
The office added that the fraternities will get out of the dorms only the number of men that they put into them.

A scholastic average of 1.0 for the preceding semester, or an All-College average of 1.0, is required by the IFC before a student may be pledged.

Rushes who break pledges may not pledge another fraternity for 30 days. This ruling does not apply to pledgeships dissolved by the fraternity.

IFC Sets Rules
Although a student may pledge only one fraternity, he may be rushed by any number of houses. Rushing is followed by a pledgship period, provided the student receives a bid and accepts it. Pledgship normally lasts one semester, and is ended when the pledge is initiated as a brother.

The IFC, governing body of Penn State fraternities, sets and enforces the rushing regulations.

Porch Construction Begins at Nittany Inn

A sun porch, adjoining the main dining room of the Nittany Lion Inn, is being constructed to the west of the building to facilitate entry to private dining rooms in the north wing.
