

Alumni, Trustees Form Penn State Foundation

Action by the Board of Trustees and by the council of the Alumni Association during the summer has brought about the establishment of the Penn State Foundation. The foundation was established to encourage contributions by alumni and the general public for projects for which appropriated funds and income from fees are not available.

The foundation board of directors, of which William W. Sieg, president of Titan Metal Co., Bellefonte, is chairman, has chosen Bernard P. Taylor, former vice president of Westminster College, Fulton, Mo., executive director of the foundation.

Taylor was for 23 years a consultant on the development of college resources. In 1948 he established his workshop in Fund Raising at Chataqua Lake, N.Y., sponsored by New York University. Last year he transferred the three-week workshop to Penn State, and conducted a similar program during the last summer session at the College.

Trustees to Decide

Fund raising activities will be divided into two distinct areas with contributions credited to separate funds. The alumni fund will receive all contributions from alumni and former students, and an annual donation plan will be established through the organization of the Alumni Association. A special gifts fund will be developed by the executive director of the foundation to receive all non-alumni contributions.

All finances will be handled by the treasurer of the College. The board of directors with the approval of the trustees of the College will decide when and how the money will be used.

Board Consists of 12

Numerous projects for which private funds are needed have already been suggested, according to President Milton S. Eisenhower, an ex officio member of the board of directors. Among the suggested uses for the funds are fellowships, scholarships, student loan funds, an all-faith chapel, non-sectarian religious activities, furnishings for the planned student union building, art gallery, works of art, special institutes, special research projects, and equipment and facilities not normally provided by appropriated funds.

The 12-man board of directors includes five persons named by the College trustees: four elected by the alumni council, and three ex officio members, including President Eisenhower, S. K. Hostetter, College treasurer; and Ridge Riley, executive secretary of the Alumni Association.

Sept. 25 Slated As Gov't Day

The Student Government Day committee, set up by All-College Cabinet, has set Sept. 25 as All-College Student Government Day.

The purpose of a student government day, according to Robert Smoot, chairman of the committee, is to orient new students in and better acquaint regular students with student government at Penn State and their place in it.

The day's program lists joint coffee hours of Leonides, independent women's organization, and the Panhellenic Council, governing body of sororities. Pearl O. Weston, dean of women, will attend this meeting.

Another coffee hour of the Interfraternity Council, governing body of fraternities, and the Association of Independent Men, governing body of independent men, will be held. H. K. Wilson, dean of men, will attend this meeting.

That evening, President Eisenhower will deliver a keynote address to students at Schwab Auditorium immediately before the All-College Cabinet will stage an actual meeting.

Loyalty Oath -

The day following his dismissal, a group of faculty and other employees of the College together with interested citizens met to protest the action.

Out of this meeting evolved a committee composed of Elton Atwater, associate professor of political science; John Ferguson, professor of political science; Joseph Rayback, associate professor of American history; Hans Neuberger, professor of meteorology; and Werner, professor of American literature, chairman.

The committee prepared a statement of facts in the case and presented it to President Milton S. Eisenhower. The President, however, declined to discuss the case specifically, and discussion centered around the College loyalty procedures in general.

The President had announced at the time of MacRae's dismissal that if he were to fail to dismiss MacRae, he would be unable to make the certification to the governor required by the Loyalty Act. This, he said, would have tied up all State funds appropriated for the College.

The five man committee is checking on loyalty procedures at the University of Pittsburgh, University of Pennsylvania, and Temple University—the three other State-aided colleges—to find out how they are applying the Loyalty Act to their employees.

The committee also is trying to find out how and why, the original set of loyalty rules at Penn State, issued in May, has been changed. This rule change, MacRae's interceders claim, changes the burden of proof from the board and places it upon the defendant.

The committee has recommended that the case be reopened, it can be expected to repeat this request as a part of its statement after investigations are completed next week.

Meanwhile, Swan, who gave up his new position at the College rather than fulfill the College's loyalty requirements, issued a statement stating, "I stand on my upbringing and past record.

"I believe we shall not experience loyalty through uniformity, through signing papers, taking oaths," he said.

It was pointed out that he was not under contract and that he met all the requirements except those of the Loyalty Act.

He is a graduate of Oberlin College and was also educated in Switzerland.

Ag Engineers to Meet

Polio Epidemic Spreads As Centre Countians Act

Although no new cases of polio were reported yesterday in Centre County, the epidemic situation created in the central Pennsylvania area increased as nearby communities took steps to end the spread of the dreaded disease.

A program was launched in Bellefonte with the purchase of a fogging machine in an effort to thwart the epidemic which has affected 108 persons in Centre, Clinton and Lycoming counties. Forty-seven have been stricken in Centre County.

The epidemic will continue, however, until mid-October, Mrs. Balser Weber, Centre County chapter chairman for the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, has reported.

Mrs. Weber advised persons not to frequent public places, to keep to an immediate group, and to stay clean.

Mrs. Weber underscored the purchase of the fogging machine in Bellefonte, and warned that overconfidence is as dangerous as an epidemic. Mrs. Weber said an aerial spraying of sections of the county might help shorten the epidemic, but immediate use of the spray will only eliminate possible carriers.

Meanwhile, three Centre County communities, Howard, Milesburg and Snow Shoe, have made efforts to bring the epidemic under control. Howard has started a drive to buy a fogging machine, Milesburg used a spraying machine last night after information on its operation had been received from the College, and Snow Shoe was scheduled to be sprayed at 6 a.m. today.

In State College borough yesterday, Dr. J. F. Shigley, president of the Board of Health, discussed the polio situation at a special meeting in Borough Hall.

Young Republicans Club

The local Young Republican Club will meet for the first time this semester at 7 p.m. tomorrow in 202 Willard.

The organization is affiliated with the Pennsylvania Federation of Young Republican Clubs. It is planning extensive activities during the coming campaign, Vincent Yakowicz, president, said yesterday. Students interested in becoming active in club affairs are urged to attend the meeting regardless of whether they are of voting age, Yakowicz added.
