Frosh Name Committees; Pick Colors

Nearly 400 freshmen, the larg est number to attend a class meet ing in the past few years last night selected Maroon and White as class colors, set up a temporary class dance committee, and recommended to the Freshman Cus toms Board that freshman womer wear dinks next year. Robert Smoot, freshman class president, complimented the Class of '56 on the large attendance and promised them that "the big meet ing would go a long way to short-ening customs."

After a long discussion, the freshmen sent to the Freshmen Customs Board the suggestion that freshman women wear dinks in the future. Class members said that the dinks for women would make the class look more uniform and that the women would have less trouble with different hairdos than they do with ribbons.

Joseph Goldstein was appointed chairman of a committee to determine and reserve possible dates for a class dance. Smoot said that May 2 had been tentatively reserved on the College calendar.

Other members of the committee are Geraldine Aquist, James Bowers, Patricia Brown, and James Snyder. This committee will serve until permanent class officers are elected.

Smoot told the freshmen that the length of customs would be largely dependent on how well they learned College traditions. He said that some freshmen would be given a test on College three discoveries as one of three group leaders for the seventh National Conference on Citizenship at Washington, D.C., last week.
