Anderson Edits Calhoun Works

The only reprints from the original speeches and treatises of 19th century statesman John C. Calhoun have been edited by Dr. John M. Anderson, head of the Department of Philosophy, in a book entitled, "Calhoun—Basic Documents."

Dr. Anderson explains that interest in Calhoun's philosophy has increased because the statesman was concerned with the protection of minority rights, the role of power in government, and other problems the United States is facing today.

Granary Erected For Ag Tests

A new quonset-shaped metal granary has been erected at the College to be used for a series of experiments in the drying of grain. It will become the property of the Agricultural Extension Service at the completion of the tests. The structure, which has double walls for self-ventilation, embodies the principle of using unheated air to dry the grain which enters the granary through a hole in the roof. Fans will be used to speed the process.

Crop Group to Meet

A proposed new seed law for Pennsylvania will be among topics for discussion when directors of the Pennsylvania Crop Improvement Association hold their fall meeting at the College today. Plans for the association's annual meetings at the 1952 State Farm Show are not yet completed, N. W. Hartung, secretary, said.

Student Faints, Falls to Road, Is Hospitalized

A student became ill and collapsed yesterday morning at the intersection of the Mall and Pollock road, according to Capt. Philip Mark of the Campus Patrol.

Rumors of all sorts concerning the incident circulated about the campus yesterday. In reply to some of these rumors, the student, who is now in the infirmary, said, "I just blacked out. That's all."

Captain Mark explained that an automobile, steered by a campus patrolman, was approaching the intersection when the student collapsed in the street. The automobile was being pushed from a restricted parking place by the Campus Patrol station wagon. The station wagon was operated by Mark at the time.

The student explained that the blackout was the result of a chronic physical condition, and said that he was not struck by the vehicle. According to Mark, the lead automobile did not have any marks to indicate that a collision had taken place.

5 Players Act As 'Guinea Pigs'

Five members of the cast of "The Importance of Being Earnest" acted as "guinea pigs" Saturday when they accompanied Robert D. Reifsnider, associate professor of dramatics, to Altoona to assist in his lecture-demonstration of rehearsal procedures at the fall conference of the Pennsylvania Speech Association.

Those who made the trip were Lois Lehman, Connie Melvin, Patricia Farber, Myron Cole, and Gordon Greer.

Reifsnider is director of the Players' production of the Oscar Wilde comedy, to open at Center Stage Oct. 10.

Loyalty Case --

bers of the Tenure Board and three elected members of the faculty panel of the Loyalty Review Board to carry out the responsibility . . .

He added that he would "expect this special group, after carefully studying all aspects of the problem, either to recommend that no further action is justified, or to find that our procedures were faulty; if the latter should be the finding, I would ask the group to recommend what total corrective action, within the framework of the law, seemed to it to be possible and appropriate."

It was explained that any proposal for revision should be accompanied by specific recommendations, and any recommendation for a rehearing of the MacRae case be extended to include "an appropriate method of conducting such a hearing."

The members of the special committee, besides Hall, are A. Witt Hutchison, professor of chemistry; Corliss R. Kinney, professor of fuel technology; Nelson M. McGearry, professor of political science; Sheldon C. Tanner, professor of business law; Kinsley R. Smith, professor of psychology; and Paul H. Margolf, professor of poultry husbandry.

Journ Forum Hears Shea

A new type of Fascism has taken root in Latin America and is spreading, Frank Shea, foreign correspondent for Time magazine, told the journalism forum yesterday.

Shea was in Buenos Aires when the Peron government confiscated the plant of the democratic newspaper, La Prensa. He said that the totalitarian influence of the Argentine regime has been felt during the past year in Chile, Bolivia, and Ecuador, all of which elected Peron-supported presidents.

While American attention has been engaged in Europe and Asia, he said, Latin America has been slipping away.
