2 Grad Students' Work Is Now For the Birds

Two graduate students in entomology, under the leadership of Hubert Frings, associate professor of entomology, are seeking a way to rid the borough of starlings.

By finding the birds' roosting places and studying their habits Joseph Jumber and Anthony Natale hope to find a way to control the pests. They are also taking some of the starlings into their laboratory to study the birds' reaction to sound, light, and other stimuli.

Jumber and Natale have asked residents who are bothered with the birds to call or notify Dr.

Frings at the College, extension 735, so the work can be carried out as rapidly as possible.

52 Chairmen Outline IFC Rush Program

Rushing chairmen of 52 Penn State fraternities and the rushing committee of the Interfraternity Council have outlined a rushing program that will be set in motion this semester, Thomas Schott, committee chairman, has announced.

The aim of the program, Schott said, is to arouse interest and orient freshmen and new students in the College fraternity system.

He added that the program will dispel any false ideas about the system that are currently existing by presenting the facts on the system as a whole.

The first step in the orientation program will be the distribution of a magazine, "Penn State Fraternities," to all freshmen and new students by Oct. 15. Reply cards will accompany the magazine so that all having the desire to "go fraternity" can do so by presenting the card to dormitory counselors.

The cards will be collected Oct. 31 and returned to the committee. Then a master list of men expressing a desire for fraternity affiliation will be prepared and distributed to fraternities.

Another part of the program is the compilation of a list of fraternity presidents and rushing chairmen. This list will be made available to all dormitory counselors. Any questions that arise concerning individual fraternities will be discussed with these men, Schott said.

An open house, with all houses taking part, is scheduled from 2 to 5 p.m. Oct. 26. This will give interested men a chance to look over the houses they like.

A movie portraying fraternity life, "A Toast to Your Brothers," will be shown Oct. 22 and 23 at locations to be announced later. Questions about fraternity life will be answered at these times.
