

Movies to Portray Comedy, Adventure

Adventures under the Big Top and in the "land down under" plus the second comedy of the week concerning the complications of research work will play this weekend at State College theaters.

This time the researcher is Cary Grant, who stars with Ginger Rogers, Marilyn Monroe, and Charles Coburn in "Monkey Business," playing today through Monday at the Cathaum. When the scientist discovers a magic youth potion he doesn't stop at experimenting on chimps . . . he tries it on himself, too.

It's then that Grant slips back into childhood and takes to hot rod racing, jitterbugging, and the like. Feature time is 1:47, 3:41, 5:35, 7:29, and 9:30 p.m.

DeMille has turned from biblical and historical lore to come up with "The Greatest Show on Earth," a lavish circus epic playing tonight through Tuesday at the State. The stars do their own stunts in this show, the bulk of which was shot during actual circus performances.

Starring Betty Hutton, Charlton Heston, Cornel Wilde, Dorothy Lamour, Gloria Grahame, and James Stewart, the feature begins at 1:57, 4:26, 6:51, and 9:33 p.m. It is being shown at advanced prices throughout the country.

"Skirts Ahoy" ends a two-day run tonight at the Nittany. A technicolor production of life on a ranch in Australia during the drought of 1900, "Kangaroo" may be seen at 2:45, 5:11, 7:37, and 9:45 p.m. tomorrow. Starring Maureen O'Hara and Peter Lawford, scenes include cattle stampedes, wild Aborigine dances, and stock-whip fights.

"Red Shoes," with the dancing of English ballerina Moira Shearer, comes back to the Nittany Monday for three days. Feature time is 5:20, 7:34, and 9:48 p.m.

Talk About—

hour standing by herself while you traipse up and down in front of Rec Hall waiting for the fellow on the inside to fight his way out.

Maybe there is an answer. If enough "house functions" arise to take the place of prom going, perhaps the crowds won't be as great, and the ticket exchange won't be such a tough battle. But then too, the lost revenue may mean the downfall of proms altogether. Anybody have any suggestions?

Dungaree Drag Makes Every Year Leap Year

By MIMI UNGAR

Many things take four years—it takes you four years to get through high school, four years to get a college degree—and it also takes four years for Leap Year to arrive.

Cwens, sophomore women's hat society, doesn't wait for leap years to sponsor its annual Dungaree Drag. Sadie Hawkins has taken the spotlight for the past seven years at the annual informal, girl-ask-boy affair.

One of the famed statements is "Leap Year's here—grab while the grabbing is good." Although much of leap year has passed, many Cwens are still using this as a sales angle when approaching potential ticket buyers.

Tickets for the Drag, priced at $1.50 per couple, are on sale at the Student Union desk in front of Old Main, and at booths in front of the Carnegie Hall bulletin board and the Corner Room. They will also be sold at the door.

The hundreds who have said the "word" will be dancing from 9 p.m. to midnight tomorrow in Recreation Hall to the music of Jack Huber and his orchestra.

To make the women do all the preliminary work, one of the features of the annual affair is for the preparation of corsages by the women for the men to wear. The man wearing the most original corsage will receive a prize for his escort's efforts.

Though many consider it natural to think of Sadie Hawkins when mentioning Leap Year, it is doubtful that the original meaning of the term implied dungarees. However, draggers will carry the term to its loosest construction when they appear in their dungarees—the official dress for the affair.

Many women may have qualms each time a girl-ask-boy affair rolls around—they may be shy, you know. But when no one is around, they manage to do the asking in their modest ways.

Thru the Looking Glass

with Gabbi

Saw a sign in an office the other day that read, "Silence is Golden." I'm a firm believer in that quotation . . . that's why they call me "sonny boy" in class. All right, Gabbi—cut the comedy and get on with the column.

JUST IN CASE . . .

Is your roommate the kind of person who's always "mooching" a cigarette from you? In that case, why not throw her a subtle hint and give her a cigarette case for her very own? Saw a beautiful selection at Ethel's the other day. The leather kind that you just press—and presto! your cigarettes are visible. Really unique. A rainbow selection for only $2.00.

LET'S REST A WHILE . . .

By the way, I just happened to think of the "proverbized" leather book-marks I saw at Ethel's. They all say the cutest things—"Here I fell asleep," "Let's rest a while," etc.—the perfect little reminders for the over-studious (at State?) students. And, you can't beat the price anywhere—just a mere quarter for any of the many to choose from.

"CONVERSATION PIECES"

While we're on the subject of conversation pieces, let me tell you about the note paper I bought the other day. There's just one word to describe it . . . ADORABLE!! (There I go getting feminine again). But really, Penna-Dutch motifs are adorable . . . especially when they're boxed and raring to sell at only $1.00 a box.

GOING -- going . . .

Yes, everything's going down at Ethel's . . . so, you'd better hurry down, too—and as for me, I'm about gone. (Go girl, go!!!)
