Pol Sci Club Discusses Definitions of Loyalty

The difficulty of attempting to define loyalty in a democracy was shown to Political Science Club members Sunday night when they spent an hour discussing the subject and finally decided loyalty could best be defined in a negative manner.

Different loyalties, such as loyalty to oneself, one's country, and one's religion, were mentioned by Dr. Neal Riemer, assistant professor of political science and club adviser, in introducing the subject.

Included in the negative definition was that loyalty is not overthrowing the government by use of force or violence. The word is not synonymous with conformity, however, as conformity is used to measure loyalty in such laws as the Pennsylvania Pechan loyalty oath and the federal loyalty program.

When loyalty is defined only in the negative, one has difficulty in trying to prove his loyalty.

The group agreed that a stronger criteria than the clear and present danger doctrine used in determining subversive speech is needed to protect the nation's security. The benefits of having individual employers determine employees' loyalty versus a central governmental agency checking the loyalty of workers in such departments as the Atomic Energy Commission was debated.

In discussing restrictions on teachers, public speakers, and the Communist party, it was pointed out that the government does not think too much of the intelligence of the American people or of their ability to listen to various sides of an issue in order to determine the "right" side.

Motorcade Entries Deadline Set Today

The deadline for entries in the motorcade is 5 p.m. today, Fred M. Coombs, chairman of the Pennsylvania Week committee, has announced.

Any independent organization, fraternity, or sorority may enter the motorcade to be held Saturday before the Homecoming football game. Entries may be turned in at the Student Union desk in Old Main, Coombs said.

Six more groups entered the motorcade yesterday to bring the total entries to 18, George Donovan, Student Union director, reported yesterday.

Bases for Judging Announced

"Pennsylvania Defends Freedom," Pennsylvania Week theme, will also be the theme of the floats, Coombs said. Cars, trucks, and trailers may be used for floats.

Judging of the floats will be based on appropriateness to the theme, originality, eye-catching appeal, beauty, amount and quality of work involved, and general artistic worth. There is no limit on the amount of money an organization may spend on individual floats, Coombs said. Living creatures, both animal and human, may be used in connection with the float.

Cooperation Urged

The parade will begin at 12:15 p.m. Saturday and circle Beaver Field once, Coombs said. The climax of the parade will be a float carrying the Homecoming queen and her court.

Sororities and fraternities have been urged to cooperate by Coombs. Fraternities desiring to work with a sorority may call Marlene Heyman, president of Panhellenic Council, 151 Simmons, Coombs said.

A gift certificate will be presented to the winning student organization, Coombs said. If a sorority and a fraternity cooperate, a gift certificate will be presented to each organization.

Previous Entries Named

Organizations that signed up yesterday were Chi Phi-Kappa Kappa Gamma; Pi Kappa Phi; Sigma Phi Epsilon-Kappa Delta; Phi Gamma Delta; Quarterdeck Society, and Pi Tau Pi Sigma.

Previous entries were Sigma Alpha Epsilon-Chi Omega; Phi Kappa Psi-Alfa Chi Omega; (Continued on page eight)

The mixer is open to all physical education majors and faculty. Ernest B. McCoy, dean of the School of Physical Education and Athletics, will be among the faculty guests at the mixer.

The chief aim of the Halloween-decorated party is to encourage better student-faculty relationships, according to council president Margaret Lamaster.

The program will include progressive games, prizes, group singing, and social, square, and folk dancing. Refreshments will be served. Two first and two booby prizes will be awarded for honors in the progressive games, while a secret grand prize will be given in connection with the games.

The Home Economics Student Council voted Tuesday night in favor of the proposed $2 per semester freshman LaVie assessment.

The assessment, approved by All-College Cabinet last Thursday, is subject to a second cabinet approval before it is officially recommended to the Board of Trustees. The assessment is necessary to avoid a deficit in production of future yearbooks, according to Douglas Schoerke, editor. The freshman assessment would begin in February.

The council approved the giving of proceeds from the "Apple Jack Jump" to the Penn State Student Scholarship Fund, established two years ago.

Two new junior alternate council members are Ona Kay Lee and Bernard Ambrose.

Nominations for Freshman Council will be held from Oct. 21 to 25 and elections Oct. 30 and 31.
