

Pollock Council Hits Barons About 'Apathy'

A great deal of discontent over apparent "apathy" in the Barons, Nittany-Pollock social organization, and the absence of a Barons member at the Pollock Council meeting last night brought about a motion to send the organization a letter reminding it of its constitutional duties to the council.

A previous letter had been sent to the Barons by the council asking for action. The Barons replied in a letter to council President Donald Douglass that to date the Barons had got plans underway for the Splinterville Review and that several other social functions were being planned. The letter also reminded the council of its constitutional obligation to provide the Barons with a financial backing of 40 per cent of the council's treasury.

Some discussion was given to proposing an amendment to the constitution restoring a social committee to the council. However, further action was suspended on the matter until the council meets Tuesday to discuss the situation with the Barons.

Food problems facing the council were discussed with Area Food Supervisor Robertson. Robertson extended an invitation for any ideas which might help in improving conditions and praised the council for past cooperation.

Changes Passed By Engineers

Changes in the Engineering Student Council constitution were approved for the second time at a council meeting held last night.

The changes will become effective if approval is given at the next meeting, Robert Watson, council president, said.

Watson asked council to consider changes in the Recreation Hall seating plans of Ernest B. McCoy, dean of the School of Physical Education and Athletics. Under the new changes, 100 of the 300 tickets to be given to alumni, faculty members, and townspeople would be complimentary tickets, Watson said. The council has rejected the McCoy plan. No action was taken on the new proposal.

A proposal is being developed for council approval to help combat possible cheating in the School of Engineering, according to Lowell Minor, chairman of the ethics committee.

Nov. 24, Lyon said. Petitions will be self-initiated.

Two nominees will then be elected to the board by West Dorm area residents.

The council passed a motion encouraging better conduct of students in dining halls. Lewis Goslin, chairman of the foods committee, reported students were blowing straw wrappers into the paneling of the sound-proof ceiling, and the food service was spending money for their removal which otherwise could be spent for food.

The West Dorm social committee will meet at 7 tonight in 127 Hamilton, George Forsyth, committee chairman, announced.

agreed with a few ideas in the plan but agree upon the basic need for a seating plan for faculty and other persons connected with the College.

In opposition to the plan are Interfraternity Council; the Senior Class; Association of Independent Men; and the Agriculture, Liberal Arts, Engineering and Education school councils; and both Nittany and Pollock councils.

Seven groups have acted on McCoy's second plan, that for divided tickets at crowded games. All seven have opposed the plan.

longer have cars on campus to turn in their stickers to the Campus Patrol for redistribution.

Eleven cases were brought against students for driving on campus without permits and parking illegally in areas assigned to students with registered cars. Donnal explained that under present regulations drivers without permits are not allowed to park or drive on campus during class hours. Cars parked overnight will be towed away by the Campus Patrol.

Four cases of parking in visitors spaces were dismissed on the grounds that the cars reported to Tribunal belonged to students' parents and are no longer on campus.

One student protested a $1 suspended sentence for illegally parking near his classroom when he had a sprained ankle and could not walk. Donnal reminded students that temporarily handicapped drivers may apply to the Campus Patrol for temporary parking permits in areas near their classes.

MY QUESTION TO THE G-E STUDENT INFORMATION PANEL:

"What is General Electric's policy on employment in light of the draft?"

... John C. Bennett, University of Rochester, 1953

The answers to John Bennett's question -- excerpts taken from the panel discussion -- are given below.

R. J. CANNING, Business Training Department ... Basically, the Company is interviewing and considering college students for employment without regard to their draft status. We're not passing over men because they are eligible for the draft—we're hiring them if they have the qualifications we want in our employees. We are looking at the area of employment on a long-range basis, and we think we are going to carry a perpetual inventory of men in the armed forces for a considerable period of time. It's true we lose some men, but we get many back, and with this in mind our policy is based on personal qualifications, not on draft eligibility.

J. L. MICHAELSON, General Engineering Laboratory ... We are experiencing a growing appreciation of the importance of an adequate supply of well-trained professional people to this country's immediate and future welfare. Although this situation creates excellent opportunities for you students for future employment, the draft may leave you plagued by uncertainty for the present. But, remember this, we are not only considering college people for employment entirely for the year 1952. We are also thinking ahead to the years '54, '55, and '56, and if we find a good man now, knowing he is going into military service, we will still make long-range employment plans for him. We still would like to have him come with us after he has completed his military service.

M. M. BORING, Engineering Services Division ... Whether or not you are called into military service you can reasonably expect to follow your profession for approximately 30 or 40 years. Your solution to the many problems, such as this one, which arise during your entire productive period, will be a lifetime undertaking. A period spent serving your country in a military way will represent a relatively small part of your total professional life. The way you handle a problem such as this, and the information you get to help in its solution, will determine to a large extent your ability to handle future problems.

Now, where does General Electric stand in regard to this draft situation? This is our policy. Regardless of military status, we desire to interview all students who are interested in our Company. And, irrespective of military status, we will make employment offers to all who have the qualifications we are looking for, and whom we would like to have become members of the General Electric family. If any of these people are called into service before starting work with us, business conditions permitting, our offers will be waiting for them when they return. Those with us before being called into service will maintain continuity, and, barring unforeseen circumstances, will be assured of employment upon return.

Following World War II we did not have to go back on a single promise. When the present world situation is concluded we hope our record will remain the same.
