

Texans Lose NFL Loop Franchise

DALLAS, Nov. 12 (AP)—The Dallas franchise in professional football folded today in the wake of losses that ran to almost a quarter of a million dollars with the season a little more than half finished.

President Giles Miller of the Texans, a club that came to Dallas last winter as the first major league professional football franchise in the state, announced that it was being turned back to the National Football League.

He explained that the club did not have sufficient funds to meet its obligations, adding, "for that matter, unless additional funds were made available immediately this club could not play its next game."

In Philadelphia, Bell said he has not been notified "formally" that the Dallas franchise has been turned back to the league for operation.

Bell said that he wasn't sure just what Miller meant when he told a press conference that the pro team was "now in the hands of the league."

"The only thing I can tell you now," said Bell, "is that regardless of who operates Dallas it will complete its schedule of five games this season."

Dallas still has home games with the Chicago Bears, and Detroit Lions and away games with Detroit, Green Bay and the Eagles.

A Punting Whiz

College football coaches usually scrutinize out-of-state boys for an outstanding passing whiz, a triple threat, or a specialist in place kicking or punting. For Penn State's Coach Rip Engle it took three years before he found the latter performer. Surprisingly, the punter was found in Engle's own backyard.

Ted Kemmerer

High. He kicked exceptionally well in high school, averaging 38 yards.

The finer points on kicking were shown to him by his father who was coach at State College High at the time. The father and son collaborated in a "coke and milkshake" punting contest. This was "to get me to do better kicking."

Later in high school he entered a punting contest at Lock Haven

State Teachers College where only booters from Centre County participated. This time it wasn't for a "milkshake" but for a trophy. He won the trophy for kicking the pigskin 55 yards in the air.

Failed as a Frosh

When Kemmerer enrolled on campus, he failed to make the varsity. Instead he was a spectator for his sophomore and junior years. Early this season Bill "The Toe" Leonard informed Engle of Kemmerer's kicking ability. His successful tryout with the varsity was only the start for the stalwart. However, it wasn't until Don Eyer injured his knee before the Nebraska skirmish that "The Foot" was handed the punting duty.

Safetymen Run Back 75 Yds.

State's exceptional showings against Nebraska, Michigan State, and Penn, can be credited to his spectacular punting, his blockers, Joe Gratson, Gene Danser, and Roosevelt Grier, and the Lions' fast defense.

With Kemmerer's fine punts and a fast charging defense the safetymen from the aforementioned football elevens made a measly 75 yards on punt returns on his 31 kicks.

Against the powerful Michigan State Spartans he had a spectacular punting average of 39.6 yards in ten tries. Scatback Jim Ellis returned the punt returns for a scant 20 yards.

Averaged 37.8

In Penn State's upset win over Penn he averaged 38 yards in nine tries with the Quakers returning the punts for 19 yards. In the same game the kicking specialist thrilled the 67,000 spectators when he booted the pigskin 52 yards from the line of scrimmage.

Last Saturday, despite a slippery turf, Kemmerer kicked 12 times for a 37.8 average which was slightly better than the 32.6

mark of two Syracuse punters. Syracuse, however, was able to consume the most yardage on punt returns with 36.

The business education major prefers kicking from his own 40-yard line. "This gives me an opportunity to keep the punt away from the end zone and is just right for making coffin-corner kicks within the 5-yard line," he explained.
