

Cabinet Ratifies Projects Council

A constitution which officially establishes Cabinet Projects Council as a student government group was approved unanimously by All-College Cabinet Wednesday night.

Cabinet Projects Council originated from ideas evolved and discussed at the Mt. Alto student encampment held in September.

Architecture Convention Set Sunday

Delegates from nine universities will meet at the College Sunday for the national convention of Scarab, architecture honorary, Charles Hall, chapter president, has announced.

Vincent Kling, Philadelphia architect, Kenneth Heidrick, local architect and former Architecture department staff member, and Aaron Druckman, assistant professor of philosophy, will speak to the delegates at the three-day convention. The convention will begin at 3 p.m. Sunday and continue until 2:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Delegates will register on the fourth floor of Main Engineering until 3 p.m. Sunday. At 4 p.m. delegates will witness the initiation of pledges, Hall said.

A banquet in the Corner Room, at which Kling will speak, is planned for 6:30 p.m. After the banquet a social hour will be held at Alpha Tau Omega. Jack Long, graduate of the College and former officer of the organization, will speak.

Druckman will speak at a banquet at the Eutaw House Monday night followed by a social hour at Tau Kappa Epsilon. Heidrick will speak at this session.

The convention will end Tuesday after a business meeting and inspection of the Thomas Water Tunnel, Engineering Extension Station, and architecture of buildings in State College.

No Vacancies In West Dorms

There are no room vacancies in the West Dormitories, according to Allen C. St. Clair, acting director of housing.

St. Clair made the statement after questioned about rumors that there were vacancies in the West Dormitories.

He said that occasionally rooms were vacant until students could be notified to move into the rooms after the former residents left the College. The priority list of students who requested rooms in the West Dormitories but were unable to move in is being followed.

NROTC Application Deadline Tomorrow

Tomorrow is the deadline for filing applications for selection for the Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps program.

Competitive examinations will be held Dec. 13 at test centers throughout the country.

Application forms, to be filed with the Educational Testing Service, Princeton, N.J., are available from Capt. Rowland H. Groff, professor of naval science.

James Plyler, All-College vice president, worked on the encampment committee at that time and was later named to handle the organization of the council.

Plyler read the constitution before cabinet Wednesday.

The constitution, as approved by cabinet, sets up Cabinet Projects Council with a board of directors as the executive body of the group. The All-College vice president is a permanent member of the board as executive secretary of the council. Other members of the board are council officers and heads of committees.

Cabinet Projects Council will handle the work-of the National Student Association on campus in addition to working on other local projects.

At present there are about 90 members of the council, which existed as a committee of cabinet before its formation as the council. Plans call for expansion of the group to 150 or more members.

Andrew McNeillie, managing editor of the Daily Collegian, was named to cabinet's enrollment committee Wednesday.

Sophomore Class President Robert Homan and Freshman Class President James Bowers were sworn into office and given their cabinet seats at the meeting.

Pre-Vacation Parking Area Is Available

Students going home this weekend may bring back cars and park them on campus until the Thanksgiving holiday begins at noon Tuesday, Captain Philip A. Mark of the Campus Patrol announced yesterday.

Students who do not have permits may park in area 50 by the Jordan fertility plots and area 10 in Hort Woods beside Beaver Field, Mark said. However, he urged students to come to the patrol office in 320 Old Main for temporary permits.

The patrol will issue special parking permits to students who attend conventions that will bring more than 20 automobiles to campus. Committee chairmen seeking permits for themselves and persons attending meetings should make arrangements with the patrol so that parking spaces may be allotted, Mark said. Faculty and administrative members attending conventions at the College may also obtain a number of temporary permits.

Radio Guild Program To Feature Korean

Kyung Ho Lee, a native of Korea, will be the featured guest of the Radio Guild production of "World at Your Door" at 7:45 tonight over WMAJ.

LaRue Fritz will interview Lee. Others in the cast will include Marian Brodbeck, and Allen Klein.

Nearly four-fifths of the coal produced in Britain is cut and conveyed mechanically.

Service Group To Paint BX

The Penn State Book Exchange will get a facelifting this weekend when pledges of Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, go to work with paint brushes as one of their pledge projects.

The fraternity is dedicated to serve the College and community, and pledges must put in 40 hours of work over the semester to be eligible for initiation.

Besides painting the BX, members are plotting a map with traffic signs in State College for the borough council.

Riding Ring Cost Estimated At $40,000

An indoor riding ring for use of physical education horseback riding classes during the winter and inclement weather would cost about $40,000, Gregory A. Gagarin, assistant professor of physical education, said at a recent Riding Club meeting. There would be no student assessment involved.

Gagarin was given the petitions for a new ring, which have been circulated by the club. These will be presented to Ernest B. McCoy, dean of the School of Physical Education and Athletics, at the club's next meeting.

Gagarin stressed that the ring should be considered as a sorely-needed class building. He said the College has looked favorably upon the building of the ring, and he expects to encounter little difficulty in obtaining it.

Gagarin said the actual cost of the ring would depend on what type it was and how much extra material was put into it. He said it was not necessary to have an elaborate building.

Advisory Committee To Organize Dec. 1

Fourteen students named to the dean of men's advisory committee will hold an organizational meeting at 4 p.m. Dec. 1 in the office of Dean of Men Frank J. Simes, 109 Old Main.

The 14 hold offices in major student governing bodies.

John Laubach, All-College president, named the students yesterday.

They are, in addition to Laubach, Thomas Dennis, Nittany Council president; Donald Douglass, Pollock Council president; Thomas Fleming, Inter-Fraternity Council secretary-treasurer; Robert Hance, West Dorm Council president; William Hirsch, IFC vice president; David Pellnitz, Daily Collegian editor; James Plyler, Hat Society Council chairman; Richard Rostmeyer, All-College secretary-treasurer; Arthur Rosfeld, IFC president; James Schulte, Tribunal chairman; Edward Thieme, Town Council president; and Glenn Wiggins, IFC Board of Control chairman.

The meeting will be for the purpose of planning future meetings and discussion of prospects for invitations to these meetings.

In the past the committee has invited faculty, staff, and administration representatives to talk on current campus problems and activities.

The committee is an attempt at enabling students and the administration to understand each other's problems by meeting together and discussing the problems.

Last year the group discussed matters such as the telephone problem and the parking problem.

Players' Show to Close

The last showings of Players' "The Importance of Being Earnest" will be at 8 tonight and tomorrow night at Center Stage, Hamilton avenue and S. Allen street. Tickets, on sale at the Student Union desk in Old Main, are $1.

ICG to Hear Poly Sci Prof Speak Monday

The Intercollegiate Conference on Government will open its speaking program at 7 p.m. Monday in 108 Willard with Professor M. Nelson McGeary of the Political Science department discussing the question, "How will our Pennsylvania state legislature cope with its problems?"

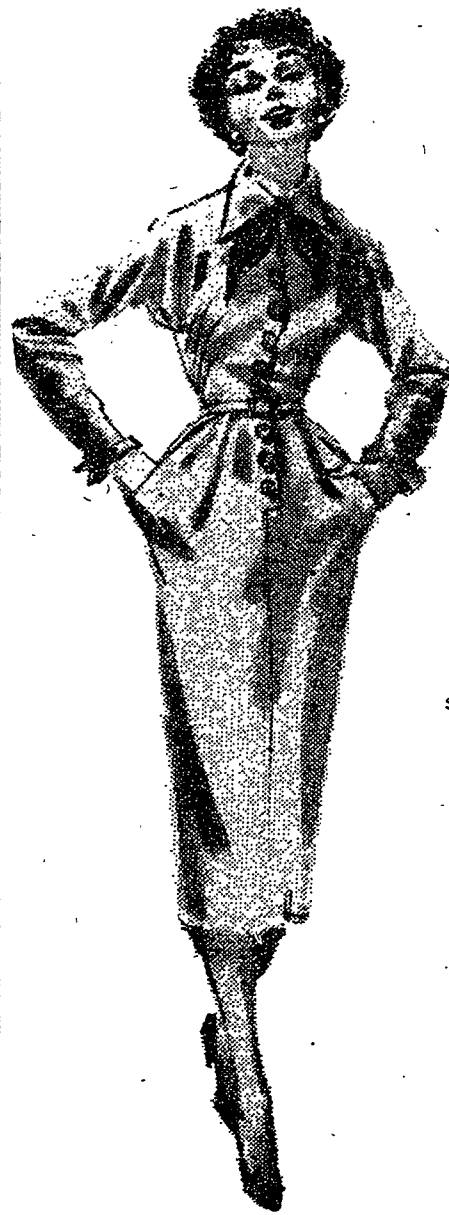

In future meetings Neal Riemer, assistant professor of political science, will address the group on the need for a Fair Employment Practices Law, and Professor J. H. Ferguson of the Political Science department will speak on the necessity for a revision of the Pennsylvania state constitution. The meetings are open to all students.

The theme for this year's ICG conventions will be a model state legislature. The local chapter will attend the regional convention at Dickinson College in April and the state convention in Harrisburg in May.

Committees will be set up and begin working on tentative bills shortly after the Christmas holidays.
