

Cagers Seek Third Win Tomorrow, Host Colgate

By TED SOENS

Penn State's basketball team will try for win number three tomorrow night when it plays host to a speedy quintet from Colgate University. Jump-off time is 8 p.m.

Last year the teams split in their two encounters with the Lions taking the first game, 68-51, but dropping the next tilt, 65-63, in a tight overtime match.

Penn State has the edge in the series, winning 17 tilts while Colgate has won 16. So far this season the Raiders have played five games, winning four and losing a close tilt to Cornell. They've defeated Hobart, Clarkson, St. Lawrence, and Rensselaer.

Dodd is Big Gun

Before the season started, Colgate's Coach Howard Hartman had been putting a lot of hopes on Al Antinellie, who was a great prospect as a freshman guard and floor-man. But Antinellie signed a professional baseball contract with the Boston Red Sox and was declared ineligible.

However, all is not tears, for the Raiders have four veterans returning from last year's squad, which won 11 and dropped 12. At the center slot is the mainstay of the Raiders' offense, Bill Dodd. This 6-4 senior scored 771 points in the last two years of play.

Dodd's great variety of shots gave him 361 points last year, making him the team's high scorer with an average of 15.7 points a game.

Use Fast Break

The other lettermen starters are Dick Osborn, a 6-3 guard and very good at rebounding; Frank Patterson, 6-1; and Captain Dan Warren, 6-1. The latter is a senior and the dependable set-shot artist. He stood second in scoring in 1951 with a total of 244 points.

The Raiders make full use of their two fast forwards and like the fast breaking game. Coach Hartman also uses the shoot and run attack, which emphasizes a high scoring type game.

It should be interesting to see if the Lions, with their sliding zone defense and close ball watching, can hold down the Colgate quintet, which has been averaging well over 60 points a game.

Play Syracuse Next

Against Alfred last week, the Staters' defense kept the Saxons to only 43 points while the Lions' two big guns—Arnelle and Sledzik—paced the attack to 56 tallies. And on Saturday a fast passing W&J team was baffled by the double teaming tactics of the Lions and was held to 50 points.

This will be the last game before the Christmas holidays begin. During the vacation the Lions will play in the all-college tournament at Oklahoma and then will play Syracuse on Jan. 7.

New Englanders did not begin to celebrate Christmas until the 19th century.

Football Scouting Overrated -- Mike

Scouting, as a weapon, is overrated in college football, says Penn State's Al Michaels.

Mike, who is credited with doing an outstanding job of scouting Pitt, believes attitude, condition and over-all readiness contribute more to the final outcome of a football game.

"Take our Michigan State game, for example," the Lion veteran explains. "I did the scouting for that game, and our preparations were just as complete, but a few early mistakes took their toll and we absorbed a sound beating."

Lion Coach Rip Engle rates Michaels a top scout and annually singles him out for outstanding work.

But Mike resists all praise with these words:

"Of course, a good scouting report helps—but it's far from decisive. Come Saturday, I'd throw away any scout's report in favor of a team that wants very much to win that game."

Collegiate Chatter

Purdue's Big Ten co-championship football squad will be unusually well represented by a delegation of eight seniors in the various charity and bowl games to be played during the holidays.

Accompanying Coach Stu Holcomb to the North-South game Christmas night in Miami, Fla., will be All-America end Bernie Flowers; quarterback Dale Samuels; double-duty halfback Earl Heninger, and Allen Hager, guard.

Norm Montgomery, ace punter and linebacker, will be the Boilermaker representative at the East-West game Dec. 27 in San Francisco.

Halfback Phi Klezek, guard Jack Houston, and tackle Billy Bruner will represent Purdue in the Blue-Gray game Dec. 27 at Montgomery, Ala.

In addition, Flowers and Bruner have accepted invitations to compete in the Senior Bowl game Jan. 3 at Mobile, Ala.

Purdue's opening home Big Ten basketball games will pit the Boilermakers against Wisconsin, Dec. 20 and Michigan Dec. 22.

Although the Purdue basketball team rewrote the school's record book by scoring 85 points, it was edged by Louisville, 89-85. This loss and a loss to Butler earlier in the season may be attributed to the Boilermakers' poor marksmanship from the charity line. Against the Cardinals the Boiler makers missed 22 free throws, and against Butler 27 shots failed to register.
