Then, because the financial matter would require a second approval, cabinet would wait for administrative action before giving this approval. This method would facilitate the speeding of legislation needed before radio equipment can be ordered and a Federal Communications Commission charter sought.

Mackey said recently he anticipated no difficulty in obtaining the FCC charter. The charter would allow the station to broadcast as a frequency modulation educational station at the College. Although the station would be FM, students in the dormitories would receive the signals on ordinary amplitude modulation radios.
