

Home Ec. Amends Constitution

Several amendments to the constitution of the Home Economics Student Council were passed last night. Articles on nominations, elections, and the council's executive board were amended.

In regard to nominations, an elections board consisting of three eighth semester students appointed by the president of the council will review the eligibility of candidates for council offices. Vacancies occurring in offices, except that of the presidency, will be filled by members of the council, elected by the council. This eliminates the necessity of a general election in the school. The vice president will fill the president's office if a vacancy should occur.

Elections are to be held at the same time as those held by other student council boards.

A report on the Home Economics Spring Weekend, to be held April 17-18, was presented. The theme of the program is "Fashions, Fabrics, and People," and will include demonstrations, displays, and lectures. Lectures will cover such topics as appropriate styles of clothing for college men and women, as well as teenagers. There will be displays and talks by foreign students on manners of dress around the world.

The people of the United States could have secured more help from other nations fighting in Korea if they had showed more respect for their forces there, he said.

Dr. Cordier's topic was "The Impact of Korea on the United Nations." His talk was sponsored by the Penn State Christian Association in cooperation with the Political Science department and the International Relations Club.

New Home Ec Course Includes European Tour

The School of Home Economics is offering a summer course in intercultural studies in home economics.

The course includes a five-week tour of the countries of Western Europe to study what is being done in the areas of food, clothing, shelter, and education.

Tribunal May Ask Probation

Tribunal sentenced a student for his third offense last night, and will recommend the Dean of Men's office give him an office probation for the rest of the semester.

The student received a parking violation for illegally parking next to Recreation Hall. Office probation would mean that any further violations during that time would bring serious consequences.

The court heard three others for second offenses, and ten for first offenses. Five paid $1 fines, while two $3 fines were levied. Five received suspended $1 penalties, with one $2 fine suspended. Two were placed on two week probation.

Three students incurred second offenses for parking illegally on days when they were late for class. One of these received a semester probation penalty.

Chairman James Schulte said the court realizes the temptation a student may have to drive on campus when he is late for class but emphasized this is still a clear-cut violation.
