

Blizzard Rages Over Midwest

By The Associated Press

A howling blizzard, comparable to the storm that lashed the Rocky Mountain area in 1949 causing 17 deaths, blasted its way out of Colorado and Wyoming Friday and began unleashing its fury on surrounding states.

The savage storm moved into Nebraska, halting highway travel in all but the eastern part of the state. High winds accompanying the storm disrupted communications in extreme northwest Kansas, cutting off the town of Goodland from the outside world for a short time.

South Dakota also was hard hit. At Sioux Falls nearly all stores were closed. Drifts along Mitchell's main thoroughfare reached halfway up the fronts of business establishments.

Schools in parts of Colorado, Wyoming, Nebraska, South Dakota and Kansas were closed.

At least nine deaths were blamed on the storm in the Colorado-Wyoming area. Five of them were caused by traffic accidents and four others, all in Denver, were blamed on over-exertion due to shoveling snow.

Three major highways in Colorado were closed by drifting snow but were reopened by mid-afternoon Friday. Highways over the higher mountain passes were open but all were snow-packed and slick and driving was slow and hazardous.

In Wyoming, the snow left the southern part of the state about 3 a.m. (MST) Friday morning, with 12 inches of snow at Cheyenne reported as the greatest depth.

High winds and drifts, however, piled up to three to four feet deep along open highways in both states.

A school bus taking 11 children home from Sterling, Colo., Thursday afternoon skidded into a drifted-over ditch. The driver had already dropped four of them at their homes, and found overnight lodging for himself and the other seven at a farm house a quarter of a mile away from his stalled bus.

Social Security Action Shelved

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20 (AP)—Republicans on the House Ways and Means Committee today side-tracked President Eisenhower's request for prompt action to extend social security benefits to millions of persons not now covered.

The Ways and Means Committee created a special subcommittee headed by Rep. Curtis (R-Neb.) to undertake a deep-digging, thorough survey of the entire social security program.

The old age and survivors insurance program now covers more than 66 million persons. Taxes are deducted from payrolls to pay for retirement benefits at the age of 65.

The Federal Security Agency estimates an additional 12,200,000 workers are not covered by the present law—chiefly farmers, doctors, lawyers, dentists, ministers, and state and local government workers.

wig, and without a wig . . . why it's shocking even to think of being seen in public.

For this little escapade, George was made the President. So, with his wife Bess and daughter Peggy, George went to the White House.

Now, daughter Peg was a harpsichordist of sorts and frequently gave concerts. The critics, unfortunately, didn't think as much of her harpsichordal offerings as did her father. Once, in a fit of anger, George wrote one of the newspaper critics, calling him a nasty name.

This infuriated the populace no end and George was soon replaced by Dwight D. Adams, the chewing gum manufacturer.

Now, don't say no one ever told you the history of our first president.

T-H Injunction Clause Repeal Urged by Ives

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20 (AP)—Repeal of the Taft-Hartley labor law's controversial injunction provisions was urged by Sen. Ives (R-NY) today and promptly opposed by Sen. Taft, co-author of the law.

The Republican floor leader, who has sponsored an amendment making about 15 changes in his 1947 law, added that he was opposed to any material revisions in its national emergency clauses at this session.

Ives proposed that national emergency strikes be dealt with directly by Congress, instead of by the injunction method which has been repeatedly denounced by labor unions and by former President Truman.

The New York senator, a member of the Senate Labor Committee, conceded in a statement that his proposed amendment was not a sure way of preventing work stoppages. But he said it "most surely would prevent undue interference by government, either in the activities of labor organizations and workers, through injunction, or in the fields of both labor and management, through compulsory arbitration."

Expense Cuts Urged by Taft

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20 (AP)—Economy advocates in Congress took hope today that Canada's newly announced 11 per cent tax cut may spur the current drive for decreased spending and lower tax levies in this country.

Sen. Taft (R-Ohio) told newsmen in commenting on the Canadian tax reduction:

"We ought to follow their example of cutting expenses so that we, too, can cut taxes. They have been able to reduce taxes because they have held expenses down."

Dispatches from Ottawa, the Canadian capital, said Canada's booming economy—in mining, manufacturing, forestry and foreign trade—was largely responsible for the tax cut.
