

Prof Discusses Freedom

"Freedom is a controversial subject because the concepts on which human freedom rest result from such controversy," Dr. Henry W. Johnstone, instructor of philosophy, said in discussing "Controversy and Freedom" yesterday afternoon.

Speaking at the Philosophy Seminar on Man's Nature and Freedom, Dr. Johnstone used ideas presented by Kant and Shiller to illustrate his views. "All of these philosophical concepts are the offspring of some idiosyncrasy," he added, quoting Shiller. "However," he said, "these philosophical concepts are no more abstruse than a game of baseball."

Dr. Johnstone took issue with those who claim that philosophical arguments are no more than a battle of meaningless words by citing a difference between the philosopher and the scientist. Whereas in arguments the scientist can use available data to settle a dispute, the philosophers cannot reconcile opinions because every philosophy is colored by personal opinion which cannot be accurately translated to another, he said.

"Controversy is one of the channels through which one can secure power," he concluded, but that power must be bi-lateral. He pointed out that a critic who is immune to criticism cannot be effective.

Tickets for the dance will be distributed free to freshmen.

Michael Rosenfeld, director of the original music review being planned for the Freshman Weekend, asked for the cooperation of the freshman class in the review. Tryouts are scheduled for March 14 and 15. Albert Jordan is head of the review committee.

Apology Made For WD Food Service Delay

Supervisors of the West Dorm dining hall apologized publicly Monday night for the delay that forced some students to wait until 1 p.m. Monday for their noon meal.

The apology was made in a letter read to the West Dorm Council by Lewis Goslin, chairman of the West Dorm foods committee. Nancy Sheffer and B. F. Mehall, assistant food supervisors of the West Dorm dining hall, said there was sufficient hamburger in the freezers, but it was not removed from the freezer in time to be prepared because of an error on their part.

Mildred A. Baker, College food supervisor, said she was "very, very sorry about it." Goslin reported to the council that a mixed dinner will be held March 17 for students eating in the North and East dining halls. A man desiring to eat with a particular coed from Thompson Hall should turn in his meal ticket number and that of the coed to his floor president by Monday, Goslin said.

Goslin said food complaint forms may be secured from area floor presidents.
