Israel Campaign Should Get Support

With present emphasis on the fact that today, the Jewish peoples of the world are again being forced to flee countries in order to save their lives, the 1953 United Jewish Appeal officially opened its campus drive on Sunday.

The goal set for the student campaign is $4200, a meager part of the national goal of $144,524,250.

Although this year's national goal is lower than last year, the needs are even greater. Especially in Iron Curtain countries, including Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Eastern Germany, and Russia, the Jews are again under attack.

The UJA, the American Jewry's instrument for saving the lives of Jews who are oppressed and threatened, has saved and aided more than 2,240,000 men, women, and children in its 15 year history. Specifically, between the end of World War II and the beginning of this year, the UJA and its agencies have rescued and resettled 623,000 Jews from Iron Curtain countries—in Israel, the United States, and other havens.

As in the past, it is the hope of the UJA that it will be prepared to feed, clothe, and care for all who escape, and to move them to Israel and other countries. The campus campaign is run independent of the Campus Chest because it is an appeal to a particular group of persons. Members of the Hillel Foundation are soliciting money for the drive which closes Sunday.

It will certainly be a real accomplishment if those who are not faced with the problem of being forced to flee their homes because of their religion will aid in reaching the goal. Israel's people are still fighting for their independence—an economic independence—and it is our duty to help them win this fight.

Israel and her people is only one of the many nations in the world that is in dire need of constant and capable assistance from persons who can provide that aid. We should feel indebted to give some of that assistance.

Teams Deserve Students' Support

Tonight Penn Staters will have their first real opportunity to show their appreciation for the efforts of three of the major indoor athletic teams. At 6:45 p.m., a joint pep rally in front of Recreation Hall will honor the wrestling, boxing, and gymnastic squads.

Each of these squads will leave later this week to take part in intercollegiate competitions. The wrestlers, finishing their third undefeated dual-meet season, travel to Princeton tomorrow morning for the Eastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Association meet. The number of possible title winners ranges from two to five.

The gym team, winning its first Eastern Intercollegiate Gymnastic Association title in six years, travels to West Point Friday where the men will vie for individual Eastern titles. The boxing team, after a poor season, leaves for Syracuse tomorrow to take part in Eastern boxing championship competition.

All members of these teams have worked hard this year to bring more glory to Penn State and its athletic program. They certainly deserve the full support of the student body on the eve of their departure to meet some of the toughest competition of the year.

Safety Valve—On Pencil Frescoes

TO THE EDITOR: It is difficult to comment in printable terms about the recent serious scratching and penciling of certain figures in the Land Grant Frescoes in Old Main. There is, however, something peculiarly shocking in the idea that the kind of malicious imbecile, minus the rudiments of taste, who doesn't know a work of art from a billposter and who is given to scribbling obscenities in public spots should find a place in an institution of higher learning. For whoever defaced the murals in Old Main is apparently as grown up physically as he is retarded mentally.

May his profs flunk him, his friends snub him, and himself come to realize that he is mighty lucky to have a free hand for such business—he ought to be in a strait jacket.

Interpreting the News

British Edits Show Disappointment

By J. M. ROBERTS JR.

A thread of disappointment runs through British editorial comment on the recent conferences in Washington between high Anglo-American officials, although they had been forewarned that the talks were purely exploratory.

As a matter of fact, the discussions, covering political cooperation throughout the world as well as the new trade policies which Britain is trying to get the U.S. to accept, were heavily overshadowed by the death of Joseph Stalin. Participants as well as observers were well aware that the end of his long reign was bound to produce changes—although their nature was not clear yet—which would affect almost any decision the Allies might try to make at this moment.

The British government had made it fairly clear to the American public that Foreign Secretary Eden and Chancellor of the Exchequer Butler had not come begging. They wanted to discuss plans which had been evolved within the British Commonwealth which required American help, and which were to be placed later before a European economic conference. The Commonwealth is suggesting changes in America's protective tariff policy in what they call a "trade not aid" program.

The Times of London called the post-conference communiques an "anti-climax" and the News Chronicle said they were an example of diplomats being required by democratic processes to say something when they much preferred to say nothing. But the Times did say that the talks had served to clear the decks.

On one point in which Americans were much interested because it seemed to presage at least a partial bridging of the gap between British and American policy in the Far East; the Manchester Guardian and the Washington Post expressed kindred views. The British agreement to further curtail trade with Communist China, said the Guardian, "will have a greater effect on American public opinion than on Chinese supplies." The Post said the greatest effect would be psychological, since China is doing most of her business by way of the Trans-Siberian railroad.

It is only natural that Britain should be in a hurry about a project which seems to contain the seeds of her salvation from economic dependence on U.S. largesse.

It was only natural, also, that the Eisenhower administration, in office only a few weeks, should feel that it was being rushed on a subject which is one of the most controversial in the history of American politics. And it is one which must be approached carefully if it is not to interfere with the stability of America's own economy which is, in the long run, the one on which the whole free world organization depends most heavily at this time.

Farm Institute Stresses Safety

Rural accident prevention was discussed yesterday at the third annual Farm Safety Institute sponsored by the Pennsylvania Rural Safety Council in cooperation with the Department of Agricultural Engineering.

Purpose of the one-day institute was to acquaint rural leaders by means of lectures and panel discussions with a comprehensive program aimed at preventing farm accidents.

Speakers included Samuel L. Horst, chief of the bureau of farm and home safety education of the Pennsylvania Department of Public Instruction; Harrison S. Nolt, president of the Pennsylvania Rural Safety Council; and Jesse Cutler, chairman of the Lancaster County Rural Safety Commission.

Committee members were Arthur W. Clyde, professor of agricultural engineering, and Charles G. Burress, professor of agricultural engineering extension.
