

Completion of Reactor Is Scheduled for 1954

The College's nuclear reactor will be completed sometime in the summer of 1954 according to present plans, William M. Breazeale, director of the construction of the reactor, has said.

The College is doing all the design work except that already done at the Oak Ridge national laboratories, he said. The College will design the building and modifications for the reactor.

About 75 per cent of the reactor design is by Oak Ridge. The remainder is being done at the College. Modifications to the Oak Ridge design are in the interest of saving College money. The entire cost, except for the active uranium for the reactor, will be covered by the College. The uranium will be given the College on loan from the Atomic Energy Commission.

The reactor being planned by the College will have the same power level as the reactor at the Oak Ridge laboratories. The building and the pool will be a little smaller.

After plans for the reactor are complete, they will be submitted to the AEC which, after approving them, will promise the College the necessary uranium after the reactor is built.

These plans are scheduled for completion sometime this summer, Breazeale said. They are being worked on by Maurice R. Gjesdahl, professor of mechanical engineering, and Kenneth B. Lawrence, assistant professor of mechanical engineering.

'Food Tasters' For Pollock Area Sought

The question of whether outstanding council members should receive an award, and the possibility of getting "food tasters" were discussed last night at a meeting of the Pollock Council.

A motion was passed calling for an investigation into the prices of the proposed awards. The award would be either a sheepskin or a key. John Quigley was appointed to find out prices.

Some members thought that by voting themselves awards they were infringing upon the right of the students by spending student money without their consent.

A motion suggesting that dorm presidents poll residents in their dorms on the problem was defeated.

Quigley requested that all council members try to obtain "food tasters" from their living unit. The job of these men would be to taste new dishes and give their opinions on them before they are placed on the menu, he said.

President pro tempore of the Barons, Alan Reeve, told the council that $22.33 was spent on the lounge parties held last week.

Chess Team Wins Championship

The Penn State chess team won the Central Pennsylvania Intercollegiate championship Saturday by defeating Gettysburg College, 6-2. In dual meet competition the College is undefeated since 1950.

Karl Segner and George Beane won two games each for the State team, and Charles Rockman and Burt Bronk each chalked up single victories. Competing against Gettysburg's best men were Peter Betley and Charles Rockman, playing first and second boards respectively. They absorbed State's only two losses.

Later in the year the chessmen will face the eastern and western champions to decide the state championship.

More Teens Face Draft Next Month

At least one out of every two men drafted next month from Pennsylvania will be under 20 years old, an Associated Press survey disclosed Monday. The proportion for the rest of the nation is one out of every three men.

The survey of state selective service directors also showed: 1. Forty-one states and the District of Columbia will take 19-year-olds in April with 14 of the states doing so for the first time since World War II.

2. Thirteen states and the District of Columbia will call 19-year-olds to fill at least 50 per cent of their April draft call.

3. Probably all but two states—Alabama and South Carolina—will be taking 19-year-olds in May.

The only state that will take more 19-year-olds than Pennsylvania next month is Illinois, which will fill the bulk of a 3254 quota with them. California is third with about 2000 out of 3164.

The reason some states are taking 19-year-olds and some are not results from the state quota system which is based on the total number it has available for service. Some states have had a larger proportion of 20-year-olds available for service than others.

A bill to place employees of the College and the Commonwealth's 14 state teachers colleges under civil service was brought before the legislature at Harrisburg yesterday.

Council Selects Replacement

Mary Hudcovich, second semester physical education major, has been named freshman representative of the Physical Education Council. Hudcovich will replace former representative Ruth Kroninwetter, who was unable to finish her term.

Changes in the council's constitution were proposed by Theodore Mortenson for the purpose of increasing council membership. Mortenson suggested that in addition to the members already listed for election, there be elected three additional members—two large and two additional members, one enrolled in the health education curriculum, and one enrolled in the physical education curriculum, to be elected for four year terms.

Council expressed approval of the fee consolidation proposal being considered by All-College Cabinet.

Lion Sculptor Says 'Give Heads Time'

By MARY LOU ADAMS

A little age and a little dirt will add the finishing touch to Penn State's latest bit of art work, Heinz Warneke, designer of the Nittany Lion statue, confided yesterday.

Warneke visited campus yesterday to inspect the completed product, which is also his design. The art work consists of the lion heads which decorate the twin pylons forming the newly erected

Junior Class To Add Records To Collection

A new contribution of records for the collection on reserve at the Pattee Library will be made at the junior class meeting at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow in the Temporary Union Building, Richard Lemyre, president, has announced.

Money for this gift is obtained from the fund for the betterment of student and faculty relations. The class receives $100 from the fund for its use.

The collection, begun by last year's junior class, consists of "The Greatest Shows of the Century" and other records. The records circulate for three days from the reserve book room and are available for the use of all students and faculty.

A report on Junior Class Week, held last Nov. 12 to 16, will be given, Lemyre said. The class will hear suggestions for improving the week and discuss suggestions for class activities.

Tours Readied By Ed Council

Plans for the School of Education's participation in the first annual all-College open house were discussed in a special Education Student Council meeting last night. Mary Glading, council delegate to the all-College open house committee, reported committee developments and summarized council plans for Open House day, May 2.

Tentative arrangements were completed for tours of Education school facilities, originating at a council-staffed information center in Burrowes Building. Other Ed school activities scheduled for the same day—the annual teacher-student conference and the fine arts exhibit—will be incorporated into the open house plans. Professors will be located throughout the eight curricula areas of the school to answer questions. A handbook containing information on education curriculums is also being prepared to supplement the tour and discussions.

gateway to the campus from N. Atherton street on Pollock road. The perfect picture of a sculptor is Warneke with his swept back mass of gray hair, horn-rimmed glasses 'hiding bright blue eyes, and shy smile.

The heads have just been set in, the seams are still evident, and the pylons have not yet become an integrated whole. Warneke said, revealing his slight accent. Time and age will give them a more pleasing, antique look.

"I'm afraid the students might be disappointed with the heads, expecting them to be replicas of the lion statue," the sculptor worried. He explained that the heads are an adaptation of the granite shrine, with a square block as a basis and the design formed in flat planes.

The addition of "The Lineman," under consideration as the senior class gift, would be a feather in Penn State's hat, Warneke added. Penn State's reputation has been increased by the Nittany Lion statue and the Henry Varnum Poor mural in Old Main, he said, and replicas and words about both are to be seen and heard all over the country. Another piece of art would add even more, the sculptor believes.

A member of the faculty at George Washington University in Washington, D.C., Warneke is in charge of the Corcoran Museum of Art in the nation's capitol and is designing pieces of art work for the National Cathedral being built there.

Returning to the campus for the first time in ten years, Warneke was struck by the increase in enrollment and number of buildings.

"Last night, going back to the Nittany Lion Inn in the rain, I tried to cut across campus as was my old habit," the artist said, "but I became lost in the maze of new structures."
