duplication of three planks, more than half of those presented. Both parties came out for the student press, a housing survey, and expansion of hospital facilities. This did not imply cooperation between the parties, but only the logical results of working on the same issues.

The two identical planks this year are on issues which both party chairmen consider subordinate to some of the other planks. Yet the very fact of their duplication points out their importance.

The two co-planks urge the establishment of an All-College Supreme Court and the establishment of a convention system for parties on campus. Neither idea is extremely original, but both are new to Penn State. The idea of a higher court for students to appeal to brought the College's judicial system into party planks for the second time in two years—in 1951 a Lion Party plank asked more consideration of women before Judicial. There are other colleges with a supreme court.

The idea of political conventions was worked up mostly on the State Party side. Both clique chairmen Mike Enelow and head of the advisers Tom Farrell have made detailed plans for a convention system—they have planned a trip to Ohio State where the system is in use today.

The system could bring more color to local politics, certainly, with Rec Hall filled with placard-bearing delegates from various living areas, banner of red, white and blue draped over the balconies. It would be an excellent way to put the College's new educational TV channel to work.

It is interesting to note the planks the party clique chairmen consider the most important. State Party leaves little doubt as to its main plank, which is summarized at the top of the party's leaflets—"To increase employment opportunity for the Penn State student while in school and after graduation..." The object is to have a job (summer and permanent) for every student before he leaves the College in the spring.

Magazine Editor

Edith Ramsey

Edith Ramsey Will Address H Ec Visitors

Edith Ramsay, home equipment editor of the American Home magazine, will deliver a speech entitled "Don't Be a Drip" at 7:30 p.m. April 17 as a part of the Home Economics Spring Weekend program.

Another speaker for the weekend program will be A. G. Ashcroft, vice president for research and development of Alexander Smith, Inc.

The program will be centered around textiles and will bring to the campus professional men and women in the field of textiles as well as homemakers, high school students, and alumni of the School of Home Economics.

Miss Ramsay will explain ways to launder fabrics made from the new miracle fibers. As a home equipment editor for the past seven years, Miss Ramsay is well acquainted with the latest developments in household equipment and gadgets. She has also had experience as an apartment house manager and a buyer of home equipment for a Newark department store.

Ashcroft will speak on "Textiles in a Changing World" and will emphasize the importance of textiles, textile products, and synthetic fibers today. In two speeches, he will discuss some present-day problems of the textile industry and their solutions.

important plank in his party's list is the first plank, which urges the establishment of a student discount card system. The plan, which Kirschner says has the backing of some merchants, would allow students to get reductions on goods from merchants who are part of the plan.

Wesley Foundation To Host Conference

Wesley Foundation will play host this weekend to students from 20 Pennsylvania colleges who are attending the Methodist Student Movement Conference in the borough.

The conference theme, "God's Word—Man's Hope," will be developed in a series of three lectures by the guest speaker, Dr. Lowell Hazzard, professor of the Old Testament at Westminster Theological Seminary.

The first address, "The Human Predicament," will begin at 8 tonight in St. Paul's Methodist Church, 256 E. College avenue. "God's Word," the second lecture theme, will be presented at 9:15 a.m. tomorrow. The last, "Man's Hope," will be given at 1:45 p.m. tomorrow.

Dr. Hazzard will also give a summary of the lectures at 9:30 a.m. Sunday as well as preach the sermon at the 10:45 a.m. service.

Colleges which will be represented at the conference are Dickinson, Grove City, Edinboro State Teachers, Clarion State Teachers, Bloomsburg State Teachers, West Chester State Teachers, Indiana State Teachers, and East Stroudsburg State Teachers.

The University of Pittsburgh, University of Pennsylvania, Westminster, Bucknell University, Cedar Crest, Lehigh University, Moravian, Carnegie Institute of Technology, Lycoming, Allegheny, Wilkes, and the College.

Marriages

Brantz-Nadler

Mr. and Mrs. David Nadler of Philadelphia announce the marriage of their daughter, Joan, to Lt. George Brantz of the U.S. Army. The wedding took place March 29 in the Keneth-Israel Synagogue, Philadelphia. Dr. Bertram Korn officiated.

Mrs. Brantz is a fifth semester sociology major.

Lt. Brantz is a graduate of the Woodrow Wilson Institute of Public and International Affairs at Princeton University, where he was a member of the Court Club.

Inter-Varsity Club To Hear Pastor

The Reverend E. C. Crimmings of the Central Baptist Church, Millvale, N.J., will address Inter-Varsity Club at 7:30 tonight in 405 Old Main.

"Battle of Warsaw Ghetto" will be the topic of an address by Rabbi Benjamin M. Kahn, director of the Hillel Foundation, at the Sabbath Eve Services, 8 tonight at Hillel. Today is the tenth anniversary of the Battle of Warsaw Ghetto. Hosts for this service will be members of Zeta Beta Tau.

A square dance will be held by Lutheran Student Association at 7:30 tonight.

Modern Dance Demonstration At 8 Tonight

Described by New York critics as master of the modern dance, Charles Weidman, dance impressionist and mime, will present a lecture-demonstration at 8 tonight in 121 Sparks. Topic for his demonstration will be "Dramatic Movement and Pantomime in Relation to the Theater."

Weidman will conduct a master class in modern dance for students and faculty members from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. today in the gymnasium of White Hall. He will choose students from the class to participate in his performance.

A native of Lincoln, Neb., Weidman studied under Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn. He opened his own school of dance in New York in collaboration with Doris Humphrey. This led to a series of concert performances by the group and the eventual organization of the Weidman Theater Dance Co. which has toured the country since 1950. The troupe appeared on campus last summer sponsored by the Artist Series.

At Columbia University Weidman recently danced the leading role in "Poor Eddy," a dance drama based on the life of Edgar Allan Poe. He has done choreography for Broadway musicals and the New York City Center Opera Co., and was granted a Guggenheim Foundation fellowship to prepare "Fables of Our Times" by James Thurber in dance form.
