

14 Selected by Werner To Compete in Relays

Fourteen men have been selected by track Coach Chick Werner to represent the Lions in the Penn Relays Friday and Saturday, with one man yet to be chosen.

Co-Captain Bob Roessler will fill the number one slot on the two-mile relay squad. Bob Gehman will run in the number two slot, with Roy Brunjes taking the baton from him for the next trip. Sophomore Don Austin will be anchor-man in this event.

In the four-mile relay event, Gehman will be in the number one spot. Jim Hamill, sophomore from Coatesville, has been given the next position. He will pass the baton on to Red Hollen, who in turn will pass it to Lamont Smith.

Herb in High Jump

Brunjes will be leadoff man for the Nittany distance medley quartet. He will run the half-mile before sophomore Lloyd "Skip" Slocum will start off on the quarter-mile jaunt. Austin will do the three-quarter-mile stint and will pass the baton to Smith, who will run the mile as anchorman.

Jumpin' Jim Herb will represent the Blue and White in the high jump and Leapin' Dan Lorch will compete in the pole vault event. In the broad jump it will be sophomore Ron Johnson, while Al Schutz will leave the discus.

Lineup May Be Altered

Rosey Grier will see action in three events. He will put the shot and throw the discus and the javelin. Werner will take two men for the 120 yard high hurdles, but so far has selected only Bill Youkers. The other man will be either Gary Seybert, a sophomore, or Charles Garson, a junior.

This lineup may still be changed, Werner pointed out, because the boys have been selected on more or less a basis of past performances, since the team has not had an opportunity to perform in time trials. Saturday's scheduled trials were canceled by a heavy rain and cold weather.

Wind Sprint Conditioning

"Sax," said Werner, "will not go to the Relays unless something miraculous happens." If the sophomore speedster does come through with this "miracle" it will probably mean a revamping of the present lineup.

The runners have been rounding into shape through a series of wind-sprints each day. In this type of running several runners race along at about half speed until they reach a designated marker, then they pour on the speed for the remaining 30 or 40 yards.

TRACK TRICKS: Lindy Remigino, winner of the 100-meter event at Helsinki last year, and pride of Manhattan, received a spike wound and will miss the Relays. A new mark was written in the books for the Boston AA 26-mile marathon by Keizo Yamada, a 25-year-old Japanese mining engineer who weighs a mere 108 pounds. Shades of Bobby Shantz.

its third win in an easy conquest over Phi Kappa Tau 15-8, 15-10. The Phi Kap's, in submission, recorded their second loss of the year without a victory to their credit. In the same boat is Delta Sigma Phi, which forfeited to Theta Xi. The beneficiaries made it their first on this side of the slate.

League L boasts the unbeaten Alpha Gamma Rho team, at 2-0, which showed no mercy to the Triangle squad. A quick two sets was all that was needed to come to the 15-0, 15-3 decisions. The loss put the Triangle men at the bottom of the pole with 0-3.

Tau Phi Delta gave Sigma Nu a second set jolting after an easy SN victory, fighting to the bitter end in the rubber set. The well earned win gave the Sigma Nu's their second triumph with no losses to mar their pride. The sets, two of them having to go into overtime, went 15-5, 14-16, 17-15. The SU victory came in league I, Tau Phi Delta sustaining its first defeat to put them at 2-1. In the same loop Theta Kappa Phi forfeited to Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

Baseball's Big Leagues

By The Associated Press
Bob Lemon nailed his second straight victory of the season yesterday as the Cleveland Indians snapped the St. Louis Browns' four-game winning streak, 4-3.

The loss dropped the Browns into a first place tie with New York.

The loser was Harry Brecheen, 38-year-old portsider who was removed in the fourth after allowing all the Tribe's runs on five hits.

The Browns rallied in the ninth inning. Clint Courtney singled, Roy Sievers drew a walk, pinch hitter Jim Dyck was called out on strikes and then Hank Edwards, another pinch hitter, singled a run over the plate.

Don Lenhardt batted for Johnny Groth and walked, filling the bases, but Bob Young then tapped to Lemon.

Allie Reynolds draped the third shutout around the necks of the Boston Red Sox in six games with a six-hitter while Joe Collins hit a fifth-inning home run for a 1-0 New York Yankee victory.

Collins, batting only .200 in the icy spring, lined a 3-2 pitch by the veteran Marv Grissom into the lower rightfield stands for the only run of the game. Only 7,193 half-frozen customers were on hand to cheer.

Reynolds, the 34-year-old Yankee ace, skirted danger in the third, sixth and eighth to get home free with his second win of the year.

Harry Dorish, Chicago's ace relief pitcher, came on in the seventh inning to stop the Detroit Tigers and preserve a 7-5 victory for the White Sox.

The 200-pound righthander replaced starter Billy Pierce with two out and the bases loaded and induced Matt Batts to slap into a rally-killing force-out.

Aided by three Tiger errors, the White Sox stepped off to a 7-0 lead in 3 1/2 innings. In the fourth, Chicago roughed up relief pitcher Dick Marlowe for three hits and three runs.

Lenhardt-Battin (B) defeated Landon-Ziegler (S), 4-6, 6-0, 6-3.
Mufson-Klahre (B) defeated Forrey-Bill Ray (S), 6-0, 7-5.

most same type of embarrassing loss.

Coach Sherm Fogg's outfit will get a return shot at the Bisons on May 20 when it hosts Bucknell on friendly College courts. Last season the Lions did avenge the early-season loss by nipping the Bisons 5-4 on home courts for the season's wrapup and also for their fifth straight win. But the win streak is now a thing of the past.

Top Lion Dick Robinson was upended in straight sets, 6-3, 6-3, by Bison Paul Remmey in the feature singles match. The Robinson-Remmey singles series in intercollegiate play now stands at 1-1, as Robinson beat the Bison ace last year, 6-4, 6-3.

Lou Landon and Bruz Ray, performing in the second and third singles slots, went three sets in dropping decisions. Landon lost to Al Holton, 6-0, 4-6, 6-3, while Ray was beaten by Spencer Lenhardt, 7-5, 3-6, 6-4.

Bill Ziegler and Bill Ray, number four and six men, were set back in straight sets. Ziegler dropped two to Joe Battin, 6-4, 6-2. Ray lost to Frank Klahre, 6-4, 6-1.

The doubles story was merely a continuation of the singles play, mainly Bison dominance. Robinson-Bruz Ray, the number one doubles outfit, lost, 6-2, 6-2, to Remmey-Holton. Landon-Ziegler, number two, dropped a three-setter to Lenhardt-Battin, 4-6, 6-0, 6-3, while the number three team of Bill Forrey-Bill Ray was beaten, 6-0, 7-5, by Mufson-Klahre.

Engle, Staff Await Blue-White Skirmish

With only a week and one-half remaining for football spring drills, Coach Rip Engle and his coaching staff are looking forward to the third annual Blue-White tussle on Beaver Field May 2, in order to observe how well their instructions have been carried out.

The annual affair, which was inaugurated three years ago, usually has enthusiasm running high in the camps of both squads. This year is no different.

Each coach is taking a ribbing from the other as to who will win the third contest, especially Joe Paterno. He has been on the losing side both times.

Thus far, Engle is pleased with the outcome of spring drills and believes that his freshman boys will be a good bunch.

"We have some freshmen (sophomore's next year) who will be top players and we hope that they will be around next fall and the following years," he said.

One of the freshmen who won Engle's praises was Lenny Moore, a scabbard of Reading, Pa.

While with Coach Earl Bruce's freshman team last year, Moore scampered 76-yards for a touchdown against the Penn frosh on a punt return.

Moore may win a starting berth on the Blue squad since Dick Jones received a hand injury. Jones will be out for the rest of the drills.

There is some talk that backman Matt Yanosich, who is on Coach Joe Bedenk's baseball nine, will hang up his spikes for this year and obtain a few days of spring practice under his belt.

Quarterback Tony Rados is in uniform but has been doing light workouts, Engle said.

In the literary field there is an axiom which states that style is the man himself. How a man writes is supposedly a reflection of his own character. Penn State baseball Coach Joe Bedenk probably wouldn't disagree with the literateurs. His own philosophy of coaching is, practically the same—style is the ballplayer himself.

Two incidents will best explain Bedenk's philosophy. Several years ago State played against Rutgers' habitually strong ballclub. During the course of the game Bedenk sent three hurlers to the mound, all of whom flashed equal ineffectiveness. Consequently, Rutgers wound up with an 8-5 victory. After the game the Scarlet's Coach Chuck Ward, former big leaguer, came over to congratulate Bedenk and offer an opinion of the pitching staff:

"They were shelled hard, but everyone of them looked like a pitcher. They knew what to do with the ball."

The other incident occurred just last week in a game against Western Maryland. State was deadlocked 4-4 beginning its home fifth. In an attempt to stir up a rally, Bedenk called on his bright-promising junior outfielder, Tom Werner—currently hitting .364—to pinch hit. The high fly that Werner lofted to left field didn't unduly ruffle the Nittany skipper. The game was plenty young yet. But Bedenk's blood pressure burst a vessel when he spied Werner lazing back to the bench. Leaping to the edge of the dugout, Bedenk bawled:

Joe Bedenk

"Run in. Look like a ballplayer." In short, Bedenk logically reasons that if you look and act like a ballplayer, you will be a ballplayer. With polish, dross looks like gold. Thus the Bedenk accent on fundamentals. State's mentor calls baseball, like practically all other sports, a game of fundamentals.

Two other of Bedenk's axioms are worth mentioning—hustle and think. Axioms which are largely responsible for the fact that State has not had a losing baseball season throughout the 24 years that Bedenk has been at the helm. Hustle. A basic ingredient in St. Louis' World Series win over the Boston Red Sox in 1946 when Cardinal Enos Slaughter hustled all the way from first base to paydirt on a single. Think. What will I do if the ball is hit to me? Where will I throw? These are elementary questions fielders should always ask—before the ball is pitched.

Here's the Bedenk logic behind thinking and hustling: physical errors are unavoidable. They happen to the best all the time. But mental errors are unexcusable. Get rid of them and you will win many more ball games.

Let's see. Hustle, think, look like a ballplayer... No wonder the Nittany diamond toilers usually show a high polish.

DIAMOND DUST: Bedenk rates college ball on a par with class B minors on an overall picture although it has its extremes. Some members of the squad are only class C or D'sers while others like ex-Duke star Dick Groat are big league stuff in college—if you include Pittsburgh in the majors... Bedenk believes that the colleges will eventually replace the minor leagues as training ground for the majors. He says, "The growth of television and radio is bound to continue eliminating the minors, and now the colleges will take the lead in developing players."... Big league bird-doggers are increasingly evident at collegiate games... Bedenk is in his 28th year of coaching baseball (five at Rice Institute).
