

Ungar Narrates 'Alice' Tonight

The Women's Recreation Association will present "Alice in Wonderland," adapted from the book and movie "Alice in Wonderland," as the theme of its 13th annual aquacade at 8 p.m. tonight and tomorrow in White Hall. Marian Ungar will be narrator for the program.

Religion

Hillel to Hold Inter-Religious Service Tonight

An inter-faith program will be held at 8 tonight at Hillel Foundation. Local religious groups have been invited to observe a Jewish sabbath eve service.

The service will include a sermon by Rabbi Benjamin M. Kahn, director of the foundation, and responsive readings by members of the inter-faith committee. Aron Hoffman will be cantor, and the choir, led by Marian Schwartz, will perform.

Helen Sidman, chairman of the inter-faith committee, announced that an Oneg Shabbat, a sabbath reception, will be held after the service.

Reverend Harold Laird of Wilmington, Del. will speak to the Inter-Varsity Bible Fellowship at 7:30 tonight in 405 Old Main. His topic will be "Salvation—Its Root and Fruit." Reverend Laird will be available for informal discussion after the meeting.

Strictly From --

Perhaps, when the new Student Union Building becomes a reality, the student-faculty relations problem will partially solve itself. But, efforts should be made to sponsor student-faculty projects and get-togethers where more of a community feeling could be fostered.

Needless to advocate additional changes, for so many people on the Daily Collegian have been doing it all year. But, I should merely like to add that Collegian and Penn State have been "real." Upholding Collegian, at times, became a little upsetting. But, your criticism is what makes newspaper work even more challenging.

Although I may very well enter the graduate ranks at this institution this year, this column holds that distinction of being the first last. Three members of the women's debate squad—Dorothy Osterhout, Mary Yandow, and Barbara Hinger—have been on the top of the "riding" list regarding this column. Since they have a tendency to call me "Doug" (because of my use of Douglas MacArthur's speeches in declamation contests), I can think of no better way of ending than, "Just like old soldiers—Old Collegian workers never die, they are forced to fade away."

APHO Picnic Tonight

21 Women Honored by Hat Society

Nineteen second semester freshmen and two third semester sophomores were tapped at 6 a.m. today by Cwens, sophomore women's honorary society.

Freshman tappers include Inez Althouse, Hester Anskis, Carolyn Cunningham, Patricia Douthett, Kay Kingsley, Ruth Kluger, Sherry Kofman, Betty Koster, Barbara Larpenteur, Ann Lederman, Sara McKnight, Rose Marie Mazza, Barbara Repscha, Roberta Sankey, Judith Sedor, Barbara Stock, Doris Thiessen, and Jean Yemm. Charlotte Kagan and Peggy McClain are the sophomore women who were tapped.

After being awakened in their rooms by active Cwen members, the tpees were honored at a special breakfast in McAllister Hall. They will be initiated May 5 at a banquet in the dining hall of the Home Economics Building.

A retreat featuring discussion groups and workshops will be held Tuesday in the playroom of Thompson Hall. The workshops will be concerned with problems of budget, programming, and projects. Discussion leaders will be Nedaine Charnbury, Patricia Ellis, Maude Strawn, and Johanne Llewelyn. Sylvia Grube is chairman of the retreat.

Qualifications for Cwen membership include 1.5 All-College average, participation in campus activities, and outstanding character. A poll given to freshman women to determine their choice of leaders was considered in the tapping.

ACEI Elects New Officers

The Association of Childhood Education International recently elected Jean Johnston fall semester president, and Frances Crawford president for the spring semester.

Committee chairmen also elected are Sally Lessig and Ann Lofquist, membership co-chairmen; Roseann Shirey, UNESCO; Gwen Griffith, publicity; Helen Banes and Carol Fry, program; Patricia Pritchard, social; Carolyn App, service; Susan Crumley and Jerry Cook, publications and branch exchange; Ruth Schnell, community and campus relations; Janet Stevenson, legislation; and Sally Hoffman, auditor.

New officers will be installed May 12.

Hyslop Will Speak At Festival Banquet

Dr. Lois Hyslop, co-editor and translator of "Baudelaire on Poe," will be the guest speaker at the Pennsylvania Interpretative Reading Festival banquet to be held Thursday at the Nittany Lion Inn.

Mrs. Hyslop and her husband, Dr. Francis Hyslop, associate professor of fine arts, collaborated on the translations and critical study on the French author Baudelaire's essays about Poe.

The Hyslops' book recently was chosen by the Nation for its "Selected List of Books of 1952." In his review, Joseph Wood Krutch, an authority on Poe, wrote: "It includes a valuable introduction recounting the strange story of Baudelaire's conviction that the American poet had somehow anticipated the processes of his own mind. The phenomenon is one of the most curious in literary history, and it cannot be documented without the material in the present volume."

Authority on Poe
Mrs. Hyslop, who serves on the College faculty as a lecturer in the Romance Languages department, will speak at the banquet on "Two Poetic Worlds." The topic will deal with the connection of the lives of the two men and the work of Baudelaire in obtaining for Poe the position of favorite American author of the French and peoples of Europe.

Mrs. Hyslop received her degrees in French at the University of Wisconsin and taught and was head of the department at Skidmore College before coming to Penn State.

5 Reading Divisions
The Pennsylvania Interpretative Reading Festival will be held at the College for the fifth year. The two-day affair will begin Thursday, and all sessions will be held in 304 Old Main. Twelve colleges will be represented.

There will be five divisions of reading—a series of short poems, long poem, drama, short story, and reading hour. Representatives of the College are Constance Melvin, Margaret Roberts, Margaret Troutman, and Nancy D. White. Mary Jane Kelley will serve as mistress of ceremonies at the banquet.

The festival is under the direction of Mrs. Harriet D. Nesbitt and William H. Hamilton, assistant professors of speech.
