

May Queen Court To Include 130 Coeds

May Queen Barbara Baker will be feted at 3:30 p.m. Saturday by a court of approximately 130, including members of the hemlock chain and honor arches, attendants, maid of honor, flower girls, train bearers, maypole dancers, jesters and heralds.

Dance Concert To Use Theme Of 'City Life'

City life will be interpreted by members of the Modern Dance Club in the second performance of their annual spring concert at 8 tonight in White Hall.

The Combined Arts Exhibit in the second floor lounge of Old Main will continue through Sunday. Both these events are being presented as part of the Combined Arts Festival of the Drama, Architecture, Speech, Music, and other related departments.

Dances in the first half of the concert are based on happenings in a city. Second half of the program consists of solo and group interpretations of various themes. Members of the dance club assisted by Dorothy Briant, assistant professor of physical education, arranged choreography for the concert.

Solo numbers in the first part of the concert are by Miss Briant and Constance Paakh. Miss Briant dances in "Unmistakeable Awe," and Miss Paakh will solo in a number titled "Industrial."

Anna Layton reads and interprets "Vision and Prayer" by Dylan Thomas in opening the second half of the concert. An Hawaiian dance, "Ulili E," by Nani Ku, and a trio dance, "Nostalgia," by Katherine Nicoll, Alberta Mills, and Peggy Mayberry are also featured.

Miss Baker will wear a full length strapless white net gown with a stole and satin train. Attendants will also wear full length strapless net gowns with stoles. The maid of honor will be garbed in light blue, senior attendant in yellow, sophomore attendant in green, and freshman attendant in pink.

Members of the honor arches will wear white and members of the hemlock chain, pastel gowns. Two flower girls will wear white dresses and carry straw baskets with small chrysanthemums.

Two young boys as train bearers will be dressed in white suits adorned with blue cornflower boutonniere. The queen's throne will be decorated with hemlock.

Patricia Hughes and Nancy Lusk as jesters, and Jean Yemm and Nancy Gulick as heralds will be dressed appropriately. Representatives of the Penn State Christian Association, Women's Student Government Association and Women's Recreational Association will wear long white gowns.

Members of Cwens and Blue Key will usher.

Forty-four maypole dancers directed by Nani Ku will perform a traditional English dance. The men's Interfraternity Glee Club will sing four selections and the Modern Dance Club will present three numbers. Ceremony practice will be held at 4 p.m. tomorrow, the May Day committee has announced.

Festivities will be held in front of Old Main. In case of rain, the ceremony will be held in Recreation Hall. Open houses and teas will be held in women's dormitories from 2 to 3 p.m.

To Speak Tonight

DR. ALTHEA K. HOTTEL, Director of the new Commission of Education of Women of the American Council on Education, will discuss "Education - For What?" at 7:15 tonight in Simmons lounge at the Women's Student Government Association convocation. Dr. Hottel is on leave of absence as dean of women and lecturer in sociology at the University of Pennsylvania. Recently-elected WSGA officers will be installed at the ceremony.

Mason Re-elected H Ec Council Head

Jane Mason, sixth semester home economics major, was re-elected president of the Home Economics Student Council Tuesday. Bernard Ambrose, sixth semester hotel administration major, and Andree Bloom, sixth semester home economics major, were named vice president and secretary-treasurer.

Miss Mason presented the proposal now before All-College Cabinet to provide compensations for student council presidents. A motion was passed instructing Miss Mason to oppose any additional compensation.

The new council will meet May 19 in the Home Economics Living Center.

Ag Prof Discusses Ceylonese Customs

Sunny mornings with temperatures ranging around 88 degrees in the shade make Kandy, Ceylon, just like Pennsylvania in the summer, writes A. H. Imhof, associate editor of the College's agricultural experiment station.

The distant land, which is now experiencing the peak of its two-month hot season, is about 1800 feet above sea level. Often heavy thunderstorms bring rain down by the bucketful, limiting visibility to about 50 feet.

Imhof, who is presently on a year's leave of absence with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, says the birth rate of the small but heavily populated country is the highest on the globe. Almost eight million people are crowded into an area of only 2500 square miles.

Research Farms

Because of the hot weather, the Ceylonese wear no shoes, and children under four or five years of age run about naked. Men wear long skirt-like sarongs, and women, as in India, wear a long garment known as a saris.

Imhof wrote that the Department of Agriculture carries on extension activities and conducts numerous government research farms. He explained that each of Ceylon's nine provinces has a district agricultural officer with a senior and junior assistant, agricultural instructor, and demonstrators.

Schools for Farm Children

One-third of the paddy (rice), which is the chief item of diet, is grown on the island.

The Department of Agriculture operates a number of schools for boys and girls on government farms. Schools offer one-year training programs for cultivators' children.

Imhof's office, once occupied by Lord Mountbatten when he plotted the entire Eastern Pacific operation, is located in the heart of the famous Peradeniya Botanical Gardens in a building built during the war by the military.
