

Thought Perspective Cited at Convocation

Perspective in thought and action illustrates the application of true education to the world in which we live, Dr. Althea K. Hottel, director of the new Commission of Education of Women of the American Council on Education said last night.

Speaking on "Education—For What?" at the convocation of Women's Student Government Association in Simmons lounge, Dr. Hottel said, "The American women who will bring a significant contribution to our society will be the woman who can raise the cultural sights of her family and aid in its psychological and emotional balance."

"She will be the woman in business or the professions who has a wider range of vision; she will be the woman who is politically literate and does something about it," Dr. Hottel said.

Women are marrying younger than in any decade in the history of the country, Dr. Hottel said, yet they comprise one-third of the labor force. One-half of that number is combining homemaking with business or a profession, and yet 80 per cent of married women devote the major part of their time to home responsibilities.

Consequently, women need a broad perspective which neither belittles homemaking as unworthy of their talents nor overemphasizes it in their lives, Dr. Hottel said. The value of college experience lies in its ability to provide this perspective, she said. Education can widen horizons of inquiry and interest, and enable women to effectively participate in varied endeavors, she said.

Installation of WSGA officers preceded Dr. Hottel's speech and a reception was held following the convocation.

12 O'Clock Permissions Granted for Carnival

The Senate committee of student affairs yesterday approved 12 o'clock permissions for women for Spring Carnival. The decision followed a recommendation made by Women's Student Government Association.

Usual 2 o'clock big weekend permissions will be granted for Senior Ball.

Susan Rice and Ann Lederman were appointed by WSGA to serve next year on the Joint Customs Board.

44 Dancers To Highlight May Day

Forty-four dancers will whirl around two traditional May poles Saturday in bright peasant skirts and white blouses to the tune of "Country Gardens," an old English folk tune.

Barefoot dancers will wind the poles—one freshman and one sophomore—with streamers of light and dark shades of lavender and green. "Country Gardens" has been used almost exclusively for May pole dances.

Nani Ku has directed the dancers and Marie-Louise Kean is pianist for practices and May Day. Practices have been held four afternoons a week for the 20 freshman and 24 sophomore women chosen by living unit presidents.

Freshman women are Lavina Hostetler, Elizabeth Smith, Barbara Easter, June Garey, Cecilia Yarnall, Barbara Woodward, Joan Ziegler, Carole Richards, Susan Rice, Patricia Brawn, Edith Kriebel, Eileen Marcolina, Sarajane Frihofer, Barbara Mensinger, Janet Ramandanes, Barbara Stock, Tatiana Armstrong, Jane Curran, Ruth Grigoletti and Patricia Nesbit.

'Canning' Queen Can Anticipate Eventful Week

Any Penn State coed can become a queen to represent Pennsylvania's canning industries June 22 to 27.

In representing the industry during this week the queen will appear on television, take part in radio programs, be hostess at receptions and banquets, and meet interesting people . . . all with expenses paid.

Entrants for the contest will be judged on personality, general appearance, and willingness to learn some information about the industry.

To enter the contest women must be students at Penn State, residents of Pennsylvania, and must be free to travel June 22 to 27.

Application blanks for the contest are available in women's dormitories. They should be returned by Sunday with an attached picture to a member of the contest committee.

Members of the committee are Jean Mastin, Joan Packard, Vivian Drayer, Jean Good and William Bucklew.

The contest and Canning Industry Week is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Canners Association, American Can Co. and Associated Canning Industry.
