

Deans of Women, Men Offer Welcome to New Students

Pearl O. Weston

Dean of Women

For the past 98 years men have had the opportunity of attending The Pennsylvania State College, while women have shared this privilege for 82 years.

Former students have left a rich heritage for you, the 1953 newcomers to Penn State. To each of you they transmit a rich inheritance — many cherished traditions, a variety of worthwhile activities, the hopes and aspirations of organizations and clubs, together with the honors and responsibilities of being worthy campus citizens and alert industrious students.

As you accept the challenge of your new environment, you will want to use the many services for help provided for you by the College. One of these is the Dean of Women's office, 105 Old Main. There you will find a hearty welcome and folks ready to be of service to you.

The dean and her staff extend to each of you a most hearty welcome and the hope that your College life may be all that you hoped it would be.

Dean of Men

It is with a great deal of pleasure that we in the Dean of Men's office welcome you to the campus.

You stand on the threshold of great opportunities. How you take advantage of these opportunities will shape the course of your lives for years to come.

One of the greatest opportunities you have is that of profiting from the many facilities and services provided by the College to assist you in reaching sound decisions on matters of importance to you.

Your instructors, academic advisers, counselors, and many other people are available to help you meet the many problems you will encounter during your college years.

We urge you to consult these people when you feel you have a problem that needs attention. Taking the initiative in seeking the advice of some qualified person will undoubtedly result in a quicker and more satisfactory adjustment to college.

Should the occasion arise when you feel you need to talk over a problem with someone, feel free to come to our office, 109 Old Main.

Froth Presents Lighter Side Of College Life

People will tell you it always rains at Penn State. Don't believe them. The only time it always rains, or snows, is the day Froth is scheduled to go on sale—or so the circulation staff says.

Froth, campus humor magazine, is published eight times a year for 25 cents per copy or $1.75 a subscription. Froth contains light fiction, poetry, cartoons, photography and jokes.

The first issue of the magazine this year will come out Sept. 22, according to Editor Marshall Donley.

No field, apparently, is too big to escape Frothy's acid 2 cents worth. Last year's themes ranged from "Corruption in High Places" to "Modern Spleen," a take-off on a nationally known movie magazine.

Regular features include "Froth Girl of the Month," with pictures and vital statistics, "Old Mania," an account of the latest pinnings, engagements, and marriages, and the "Dope Sheet," which previews movies and campus activities and explores local eating places.

A call for candidates for literary, art, circulation, promotion and photography staffs, will be made soon. Promotions are made on the basis of ability, interest, and work.

Senate Regulates Faculty

College Senate is the legislative body of the faculty. Senate meets the first Thursday of each month and has a host of committees and sub-committees to carry on its work between meetings.

Basic job of the Senate is to legislate on educational matters. It is presided over by President Milton S. Eisenhower, chairman. C. O. Williams, dean of admissions, is secretary for the group.

The Senate is composed of eight faculty representatives elected from each of the schools of the College, each school's dean, administration officials, director of extension for each school, director of research in each school, assistant dean of each school if he is in charge of resident instruction, head of each department of resident instruction, each military unit head, director of summer sessions, and the College examiner.

Other members include the deans of men and women, director of College Health Service, the librarian, comptroller, provost, director of extension and director of student affairs.

Standing committees set up by Senate deal with academic standards, admission, athletics, calendar policy, courses of study, education policy, military instruction, rules, scholarships and awards, student affairs and the committee on committees.

The student affairs committee is directed by Wilmer E. Kenworthy, assistant to the president. It has fostered sub-committees on academic honesty, College-student relations, discipline, health and recreation, organizational control and social affairs.
