

IFC Announces Dating Rulings

Interfraternity Council has announced the following regulations for unchaperoned dating in fraternity houses during the school year.

1. Women in fraternity houses will not be allowed above the first floor or in the rooms of men at any time except in special situations approved by the dean of men and dean of women.

2. Women must leave fraternity houses no later than 1 a.m. Friday and Saturday nights, except when special permission is given by the College on big weekends.

Sunday night, women must leave by 11 p.m. Weekday nights, women dinner guests may be in fraternity houses until 8 p.m.

3. Alcoholic beverages must not be served to or used by fraternity members and women guests while dating under this code.

The dating code calls upon IFC members to adhere to the above provisions and to obey the regulations of the College.

The dating code, as released by IFC, draws special attention to section W-6 of the regulations for undergraduates as printed in the Student Handbook. This section states that the president of the College may dismiss at any time any student whose influence is found to be injurious to the standard of morals of the student body, or whose conduct is prejudicial to the good name of the College.

Any known violations of this code are to be reported to the IFC Board of Control, which will discuss the case and make recommendations to the student welfare committee.

Demos, GOP Groups Active Campus Clubs

There are two active national political groups on campus, the Young Republican Club and the Young Democratic Club.

The Penn State chapter of the Young Republican Club was born during the Pennsylvania presidential primary campaign in 1952.

The group conducted the only organized Eisenhower campaign in Centre County during the primary. Students ran Republican county headquarters on Atherton street.

The club was also active during the presidential election campaign. Club activities included mixers, movies, and student-faculty debates.

Quinto is Adviser

Club officers are Benjamin Sinclair, president; Susanne Berleue, vice president; Barbara Mensinger, recording secretary; Nancy Burley, corresponding secretary; and Marian Ludwig, treasurer.

Dr. Leon J. Quinto, assistant professor of economics, served as faculty adviser during the leave of absence of Dr. Ruth C. Silva, assistant professor of political science. Dr. Silva helped organize the club during the 1952 primary.

Participation in political campaign work in conjunction with the Centre County Democratic committee is among the varied activities of the Penn State Young Democratic Club.

Arouse Interest in Government

Campaign work puts into practice the club's purpose of giving students practical political experience.

The club was founded to stimulate student interest in governmental affairs and to give students democratic answers to current local, state, and national political questions.

Club activities include social and political functions.

Officers are John Moore, president, and David Kresge, secretary-treasurer.

Twenty Serve On MI Council

Mineral Industries Student Council is composed of 20 members: eight seniors, six juniors, four sophomores and two freshmen. Two persons from each class are elected each year.

The MI Newsletter is a pamphlet issued monthly by the council as a record of its activities.

Plans have been made for an MI softball team in the spring. The council sponsors an annual banquet honoring prominent members of the MI School.

A 1.0 All-College average and enrollment in the school as a regular student are qualifications for council membership. Officers must have served as council members for a year before being elected. The president must be a senior.

Council regulates student activities within the school. Committees cooperate with the faculty through joint meetings.

CAMPUS TRADITIONS are new to Gillian Hamer, right, a Brazilian-born United States citizen, who is enrolling as a freshman. Ann Lederman, member of Cwens, has a lot of explaining to do, as this is Miss Hamer's first visit to this country.

Campus Lists Two Literary Magazines

Would-be Hemingways, Millays, and Eliots may find outlets for their literary talents in two publications, Inkling, campus literary magazine, and Pivot, poetry publication. Both magazines were started in the spring of 1951.

Inkling is published annually and sells for 25 cents. It contains fiction, poetry, and short essays. Photographic features were added to last year's issue when the magazine switched from offset to letterpress printing.

Inkling is not a staff-written publication. A call for material written by students will be made shortly. The literary board determines what material is publishable.

A $10 award was presented last year by Inkling for the best short story submitted for publication.

Candidates may sign up soon for the literary, promotion, circulation, art and publication staffs.

Pivot is the first venture of its kind on campus and one of the few college poetry magazines. It is published by students in English Composition 13, a poetry workshop.

Most material is written by students in the class, but any student may submit work. Judging is done by the staff and Professor Joseph Grucci, faculty adviser.

An open meeting will be held soon to select a staff for this semester. Pivot is published twice a year and sells for 25 cents.

The $25 Fred Lewis Pattee poetry award is given each year for the best poem or group of poems appearing in the magazine.

Alumni Re-elect Three To Board of Trustees

Three incumbents to the Board of Trustees of the College have been re-elected by alumni of the College for three-year terms.

Milton Fritsche, Philadelphia; J. L. Mauthe, Youngstown, O.; and James Milholland, Pittsburgh, have been returned to the board by the balloting.

Judge Milholland has been serving as president of the Board of Trustees since 1946.

Upperclass Officers Set Projects

Senior and junior class officers, chosen during All-College elections in the spring, form the nucleus for numerous class projects.

Two campus political parties, State and Lion, hold primary elections at which basic slates are decided. Students vote for class officers two weeks later in All-College balloting.

Officers of the senior class elected last spring are Richard Crafton, president; Walter Back, vice president; and Carolyn Pelczar, secretary. Their responsibility centers around the annual Senior Ball in the spring and the Hall of Fame including various titles for prominent class members in commencement preparations.

Each year the class votes to donate a gift to the College. Gifts donated by graduating seniors range from benches scattered over the campus and the Lion Shrine to the clock in the tower of Old Main. Donations from the class of '52 were put toward the establishment of a campus radio station.

Junior class officers Joseph Barnett, Jesse Arnelle, and Katherine Reynolds are the key people in planning the annual Junior Class Week in the fall, climaxed by Junior Prom. The class also sponsors a project, such as the 1953 presentation of "The Greatest Shows of the Century," a collection of 28 long-playing record albums.

A student must have a 1.0 or better All-College average to be eligible for election. He must be a candidate for an officially recognized campus political party.

Flying Club Gives Students Lessons

Penn State Flying Club was organized to give students an opportunity to learn to fly under the guidance of qualified instructors.

The club meets every other Wednesday to discuss the fine points of flying and to hear lectures in trick and blind flying and plane types.
