

Players Announce '53-54 Productions

By EDMUND REISS

Penn State Players have announced their selection of plays for the 1953-54 season, according to Arthur C. Cloetingh, professor of dramatics.

The first show at Schwab Auditorium will be Noel Coward's "Hay Fever" on Nov. 5-7. This charming British comedy was first presented in New York in 1925 and is very typical of the high humor of Coward. Warren S. Smith, associate professor of dramatics, is the director.

"Death of A Salesman" by Arthur Miller, will be presented March 11-13. The prize-winning play opened on Broadway Feb. 10, 1949, with Lee J. Cobb doing the portrayal of Willie Loman and Arthur Kennedy as the shiftless son. Miller is also the author of "All My Sons," another award play. Kelly Yeaton, assistant professor of dramatics, will direct the show.

Center Stage Begins Oct. 9

The final play in Schwab will be "The Happy Time," scheduled for May 6-8. This delightful comedy by Samuel Taylor was adapted from Robert Fontaine's novel of the life of a French Canadian family in the 1920's. Rodgers and Hammerstein produced the play Jan. 24, 1950. Walter H. Walters, assistant professor of dramatics, is the director.

"The Moon Is Blue" will be presented as the first show in the arena theater, Center Stage, beginning Oct. 9 and continuing for six weeks. This amusing chronicle of modern cosmopolitan life, by F. Hugh Herbert, was presented March 8, 1951, on Broadway, with Barbara Bel Geddes and Barry Nelson in the leading roles, and was recently made into a movie. Robert D. Reifsnider, associate professor of dramatics, is director.

"Juno and the Paycock" by Sean O'Casey will run from Dec. 11 to Feb. 20. Written in 1924, the play takes place in the highly complex and confusing period when the Irish Free State had been set up but had not succeeded in unifying the country around it. It is one of the best of O'Casey's powerful realistic dramas. The play will be directed by Yeaton.

Players to Give Revue

"On Approval," from Feb. 26 to April 3, is another example of British high comedy. The play was written by Frederick Lonsdale in 1927. Walters will direct the show.

Beginning April 9 and continuing through May 22, Players will present their original revue, "Pick Up Sticks." This show will include a small cast in singing and dancing roles. Reifsnider will direct the production.

An added attraction of the season will be an experimental production by William Coleman, a former student at the College, who is now teaching at Slippery Rock State Teachers College. Smith will direct this show which will be presented in Little Theater, basement of Old Main.

Cabinet Names Election Date

Dates for petitioning and election of the new Business School Student Council were set Thursday night by All-College Cabinet.

Students may submit petitions tomorrow, Thursday and Friday. Elections will be held Oct. 6 and 7.

Philip Greenberg, council president, said it would be necessary to hold elections before the tentative dates in October set for the other eight council elections by the Interscholar Council Board. A council-sponsored Career Day has been planned for Oct. 29, making it necessary to organize the council before that time, Greenberg said.

Concert Group To Hold Campaign

Community Concert Association will conduct its annual membership campaign during the week of Oct. 19, Dr. Fred R. Matson, association chairman, has announced.

Present members may renew memberships prior to the opening of the campaign.

David H. McKinley, campaign chairman, will announce names of campaign leaders this week, Matson said.

on another Penn State miscue when Dick Jones fumbled on the Lions' 27. With 28 seconds remaining in the first half, Ameche made two yards around the right end of the Penn State line and Vergetis added 11 with a pass completion to Clary Bratt when time ran out.

After Bailey's 37 yard punt to the 13 yard line, the Badgers, led by Dornburg, Bratt, and Ameche, started an 87 yard drive that brought a touchdown in 13 plays. Vergetis' placement gave the Badgers a commanding lead, 14-0.

Moore, who took Bill Miller's kick-off on Penn State's 26, had the fans holding on when he took advantage of Jesse Arnelle's block and galloped down the sideline to Wisconsin's 39 for a nifty 35 yard return. Penn State got to the Badgers' 25 before losing the ball on downs.

With three minutes and 22 seconds left in the game Gingrass went over to his right tackle for four yards and Wisconsin's third TD. Miller's point after touchdown was wide.

Penn State, trying to scorch the scoring column, found a 15-yard holding penalty making things rather difficult. In fact, the Lions were on their own 4-yard stripe due to the penalty. Buddy Rowell and Charlie Blockson added five yards before the whistle ended the game.
