

50,000 Expected to See 42d Lion-Quaker Grid Game Today

BOLSTERING COACH Rip Engle's hopes for an open-field runner today against Penn at Philadelphia is ailing Sophomore tailback Lenny Moore, who probably will see only limited action.

Penn Given Slight Edge Over State

By SAM PROCOPIO
PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 3 — If only because the Quaker coach, George Munger, is serving his last year as head football coach here, the Red and Blue of Pennsylvania is determined to setback Penn State's Nittany Lions when both teams trot onto Franklin Field today for the 42d game in their series. More than 50,000 spectators are expected to crowd into the Quaker stadium.

Kickoff time is set for 2 p.m. Penn State, which is going into its second consecutive game as the underdog, seems to possess another advantage—that is why this game is a "must" for the Red and Blue. It appears that Coach Rip Engle's gridders have a jinx floating in the Quaker City atmosphere.

In fact, the Nittany Lions have practically gone to the City of Brotherly Love every year as the "sure loser" only to come out as victors. Munger, during his distinguished tenure, has never been successful against Penn State. His best effort was a 7-7 tie in 1938.

The most important and overall series, however, is in Penn's favor, 23-13-4, starting back in 1890. Engle sees his opponent as "strong and well-balanced." One thing the Lion mentor points out (Continued on page two)

Erskine Strikes Out 14 As Dodgers Win, 3-2

BROOKLYN, Oct. 2 (AP)—Trim Carl Erskine, a handsome Hoosier righthander, shattered Howard Ehmke's 1929 World Series strikeout record today by fanning 14 New York Yankees for Brooklyn's first victory, 3-2, in a brilliant comeback. The Yanks still lead in the series, 2-1.

Yanked from the box after a disastrous four-run first inning in the opener, the 26-year-old Dodger bounced back to restore Flatbush's confidence after two shocking defeats.

Roy Campanella, playing with a painfully puffed right hand, blasted an eighth-inning home run.

On the way he struck out Mickey Mantle and Joe Collins four times each, only one short of a series record. Going to the ninth inning with 12, just one short of the Ehmke high, he whizzed third strikes past the swinging bats of pinch-hitters Don Bollweg and Johnny Mize.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 2 (AP)—The New York Yankees, angry and hurt, paid full but grudging tribute to Carl Erskine today. "That pitcher stopped us more than anything else," said manager Casey Stengel glumly. "Vic Raschi pitched a darned good game, but we didn't do much hitting for him."

Then he walked pinch-hitter Irv Noren before retiring Collins to put it in the bank.

The drama mounted steadily throughout the bright, summery afternoon with Erskine firing his blazing fast ball and sharp curve past the Yank hitters in a clutch duel with Vic Raschi.

From the moment that Erskine shot a third strike past leadoff man Gil McDougald in the first inning, it was obvious he was a far different pitcher from the wild, shaky man who flopped so badly on opening day.

Mantle went down swinging for his second strikeout in the fourth, boosting Erskine's total to seven. Then Collins for his third straight in the fifth, and Mantle once more and Gene Woodling, too, in the sixth for a total of 10.

Erskine didn't whiff a man in the seventh but picked up again in the eighth to get Collins and Mantle for the fourth time with a brilliant display of clutch work. Pinch-hitters Bollweg and Mize finally sent him over the top with his final total of 14.

Despite Erskine's spell, the Yanks managed to get out front in the fifth on three infield singles, none of which ever reached the outfield grass.

Soccermen Play Today, Nittanies Visit Bucknell

By ROY WILLIAMS

Possibility of last year's high scoring ace, Jack Pinezich, being absent from the Nittany lineup in today's opening soccer contest at 11 a.m. at Bucknell is very likely. His absence, caused by a severely sprained ankle during a scrimmage between the freshman squad and the varsity, may cause a general shakeup in the recent line selections for starting berths by Coach Ken Hosterman.

In the event of Pinezich being sidelined for the opener, Packer will be moved from his inside left position to center forward. Matacia will be switched from inside right to Packer's original position at inside left, with Milt Springer, another promising sophomore, breaking into the lineup at inside right.

"Our front line has improved during the past two weeks of practice by increasing its penetration attack," Hosterman remarked when asked about the effectiveness of his five-man offensive line. "We have a very good scoring potential, as long as the boys keep working together, and don't bog down."

Halfback Line Questionable
Captain Hap Irvin, a veteran fullback, and Emil Borra, a senior, will be definite starters by holding down the two defensive slots in the opener. Red Harris, another veteran, will start as goalie, but his promising sophomore understudy, George Geczy, will probably see some action. "The fullback and goalie positions are in excellent shape," Hosterman said.

Although the opener is today, the halfback line is still a possible question mark; none-the-less, it is definitely not a hole in the Nittany lineup. Ralph Hoffman and Ihor Stelynk will be probable starters at the wing halfbacks, with Paul Dierks, a junior, at center half. Gary Nugent, Jerry Gillespie and Dick Robinson may see action. The halfback line is loaded with talent, which makes it a harder job for Hosterman to pick the best feasible combinations.

Ten Veterans
Today's match will see the Bisons taking the field with somewhat of an advantage over the Lion 11. Although they suffered a 6-4 loss at the hands of the soccermen from Lock Haven State Teacher's College, the Bisons will still have a slight edge in "game" experience very early in the season.

With ten veterans back from last year's squad, and some handsome soccer talent up from the freshman squad, Hosterman was asked if he thought he was "loaded" with material.

"Our squad is not 'loaded', but we are very highly equipped with competitive spirit," Hosterman said. "Every team must have competitive spirit, not only against its opposition, but also from within—not despondent, but rather the individual incentive to have the fight to win a starting berth, no matter who or what may be possible obstacles," Hosterman said. "And this year, we've had that kind of spirit."

"Every soccer player can be compared to the quarterback of a T-formation football squad," Hosterman remarked. Each man must visualize, make decisions and execute his part of the play all at the same time; the combination of quick thinking by the player himself, and the team's combined speed, accuracy and timing and teamwork is what will win ball games."

Tentative Starting Lineup
Goalie—Red Harris
Fullback—Emil Borra
Fullback—Hap Irvin (captain)
Right Halfback—Ihor Stelynk
Center Halfback—Paul Dierks
Outside Right—Bill Norcik
Inside Right—Dick Matacia or Milt Springer
Center Forward—Jack Pinezich or Dick Packer
Inside Left—Dick Packer or Dick Matacia
Outside Left—Hubie Kline

Series New Strikeout King Had No Records in Mind

BROOKLYN, Oct. 2 (AP)—"I never once knew I was going for the record, I never knew how many strikeouts I had," said Carl Erskine, new strikeout king of the World Series. "I just knew we had our backs to the wall and I had to keep pumping 'em in."

The slim righthander's words were hardly audible in the bedlam of Brooklyn's dressing room as the Dodgers celebrated the 3-2 victory over the New York Yankees.

"Sure, it was a big thrill when they told me afterwards I had broken the strikeout record," Erskine added. "But I got my biggest kick, I think, in getting this win which we needed so much."

The 26-year old Anderson, Ind., ace struck out 14 Yankees to beat the Series mark set by Howard Ehmke of the Philadelphia Athletics against the Chicago Cubs Oct. 8, 1929. Ehmke struck out 13.

"I was throwing fast balls almost entirely for the first four or five innings," Carl explained. "Then I felt myself getting tired and so I started going for my curve more. In the last innings I was throwing the curve more than the fast ball."

The slender pitcher said the victory today and the strikeout record meant much more to him than his no-hit game against the Chicago Cubs in 1952.

"We were down to rock bottom," he said. "I knew if we didn't win this one we were dead. I think I was more determined in this game than in any game I ever pitched."

Loud noise and friendly banter rang through the Brooklyn dressing room for the first time since this series started.

Then Erskine, on his own initiative, planted an appreciative kiss on Campanella's sweating forehead.

The rotund Brooklyn catcher, who came close to sitting out today's third game, said it was a Vic Raschi fast ball which he pulled into the lower leftfield stands.

"Sure, a sharp pain went through my right hand but it disappeared right quick when I saw where the ball went," he said.
