General Van Fleet Views Dim Future

Gen. James A. Van Fleet, looking like the retired football coach he is, relaxed in his room in the Nittany Lion Inn Wednesday, and discussed war and peace.

What he had to say was far from optimistic.

The general has a "gloomy outlook" about the possibility of peace.

Listen to what the former head of the eighth army in Korea has to say about the possibility of World War III:

"We should prepare for the worst. . . We have no reason to coast."

"War never stops. No tactic by the Communist is incidental. The object is always the same—only the methods change."

There is "every reason to believe it is true" that the Communists are using the current truce period to build up their forces in North Korea.

The United States is "obligated to enter the Korean war again" if the peace conference fails.

These are the opinions of a man who has been actively fighting communism since the end of World War II. He directed the U.S. Military Aid Group to Greece from 1943 to 1950. Later he became commander of the United Nations forces in Korea. There he commanded the forces of 16 nations united in the world's first collective action against aggression.

The general considers the stalled-before-they-started peace conferences "a mess." India, which is policing the truce and arranging sessions of "explanations" by the belligerents to soldiers who refuse to be repatriated, met with criticism from the former commander.

"India has gone too far" in the treatment of prisoners, Van Fleet said. The Indians—"neutralists," he called them—are giving too much emphasis to the Communists' interpretation of the truce terms, he said. They "confuse, coerce, and threaten" prisoners, the retired soldier said.

Some 22,000 Communist prisoners have refused to return to their homeland. So did 23 Americans. We asked the general why. First of all, he pointed out, 23 out of the thousands of American prisoners is an "incredibly low percentage. It is practically negligible. You can expect that small a percentage (of communist sympathizers) in any group of Americans."

"The Communists 'use threats, brain-washing tactics, and make false promises' to prisoners, he said.

What method does he favor this country using at the "explanation" sessions which got off to a roaring, violent start yesterday?

"Let their mothers see them," said the general. (This idea was turned down last week by the State Department.) This, he said, "would give satisfaction to their mothers and the nation."

Van Fleet, who was on campus less than 24 hours, toured the campus prior to his Community Forum speech Wednesday night.

He recalled the eight years he had been head football coach at the University of Florida, where he also was in charge of the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

He speculated about Penn State's chances in its first home game, against Syracuse, tomorrow. And he wanted to know if the deer hunting is still good in the area.

The general, who has been awarded 16 United States decorations, disclosed he had turned down an offer to head the ROTC unit at the College after he was awarded his commission from the United States Military Academy at West Point.
