

Lion Meeting Ruling Explained by Kohn

By PHIL AUSTIN

Edwin Kohn, All-College elections committee chairman, last night explained the decision by which he ruled the meeting conducted by Lion Party members in an attempt to impeach Benjamin Sinclair, clique chairman, was legal.

A charge, stating that Sinclair was guilty of "unscrupulous conduct detrimental to the good name and intentions of the Lion Party," was presented at the meeting. Sinclair, who refused to attend the meeting on grounds that it was illegal, denied the charge. No action was taken on the charge by the group.

Kohn said he told Sinclair that he should go to the meeting and clear his name if he was innocent of the charges. The charge arose from freshmen who said Sinclair had promised them political offices in return for their support at a clique meeting Oct. 11 when he defeated Donald Herbein, seventh semester arts and letters major, for the chairmanship.

Violations Charged

"There is no precedent for a member of an organization to have the power to call meetings. The meeting was illegal, and we were to press the issue, there is but one outcome in view of the fact that the elections committee chairman has ruled that in the future all party meetings will be called only by the chairman," Sinclair said last night. "The actual procedure at the alleged meeting was itself illegal, for the proceedings did not even follow the much-vaunted Roberts' Rules of Order, Revised. Consequently, we feel further action to be unnecessary." Thomas Kidd, one of the leaders opposed to Sinclair, had said Sinclair was dodging prosecution by failing to recognize Robert's Rules of Order in constitutional proceedings.

Sinclair was charged with violations of the constitution, adopted Oct. 11 after being presented by Kidd. Kidd charged Tuesday that Sinclair tried to submit a constitution for adoption which would not have permitted Herbein to run. The elections committee approved the adopted constitution last night.

'Objectionable' Section Used

"It has become apparent that Kidd's intentions upon presenting his constitution was due to the fact that he feared provisions from last year's constitution which he helped to write would appear in the draft we presented," Sinclair said.

Kohn said last night that he understood the constitution Sinclair gave him to be approved at the meeting was the one used by the clique last spring. Sinclair said he did use parts of the old constitution's provisions in his draft, including the section prohibiting seniors from holding the clique chairmanship.

campus space and housing. The suggestion was also made that men's hat societies set up an orientation program of counseling meetings and skits emphasizing College organizations, traditions and rules.

Four possible philanthropic projects for this year were presented to the council: a scholarship, estimated at about $50 to $100, which would be recommended to future hat societies councils for adoption; sending a child from the State College area to a summer camp; sponsoring an American underprivileged child; and joining Women's Recreation Association in sponsoring a Polish orphan.

Betsy Siegler, seventh semester home economics major, suggested that the council sponsor an auction at which well known professors and administration members would commit themselves to charges, such as shining a student's shoes. The proceeds of this auction would go toward the council's philanthropy.

Final decision on a project was tabled until the next meeting. Richard Grossman, seventh semester business administration major, said he would write letters to an organization that makes arrangements for placing underprivileged children in summer camps.

The council decided that Parminus and Skull and Bones, senior men's hat societies, and Mortar Board and Scrolls, senior women's hat societies, will form the cordon on Beaver Field Saturday for the Penn State-Texas Christian football game.

The senior hat societies will also form the cordon at the West Virginia game, and the junior and sophomore hat societies will form the honor line at the Rutgers game, during Junior Week.

This was decided after John Speer, fifth semester dairy husbandry major, moved that participation in the cordon be divided each week among the hat societies, according to class. Speer said that the line was too long at the Syracuse game, when all hat societies stood on the field.

The board announced that Parminus and Skull and Bones will meet at 1 p.m. Saturday at the entrance to Beaver Field and keep underclassmen from climbing into the junior and senior bleacher sections. The council said that many underclassmen sat in the sections reserved for upperclassmen at the Syracuse game Saturday.
