Little Man on Campus

By Bibler

Attempting to remedy the faults of three previous Campus Chest campaigns, this year's Chest committee has included three exurive, and method of donation. Igroups in the campaign, and designate their donations accordingly, they will be better satisfied that their money is being Although 99 per cent of the goal was reached in the 1951 drive, campaign totals have always fell. One hundred per cent participation, not a specific mone-tary amount, will be the goal of this year's drive. The con-cern is not with how much a few give, but rather with how much many students give.

To encourage this, awards will be given to groups with the highest percentage of participation. In case of equal participation. the awards will be made to the group with the highest average contri-it was necessary to extend the drive deadline because the goal was not reached. This year the colicitation camaigns will last all three days.

The chief criticism of earlier drives was that student contributors had nothing to say about discovery and the contributors had nothing to say about discovery.

tors had nothing to say about distributing their donations. The amount received by each group was determined solely on a per-centrage basis

This year a designation system will be introduced. On the International Business Machine cards used in the campaign, student contributors may check only organizations they wish to support.

Students who wish to support all organizations in the drive may leave donations undesignated. These funds will be distributed to each of the 11 groups on a rercentage basis.

The success of these three experiments will hinge on complete student support. If the drive has support, the goal of 100 per cent participation can was reached in the 1951 drive, campaign totals have always fallens short of the goal. In these same years, students were asked to contribute $2 each.

In the final tabulation, the designation system will indicate whether students prefer to support national or local organizations. It will also show which of these growth at the fact of the state of the sta these groups they feel are most significant. In the future this can serve as a guide in selecting groups to be included in the drive.
