

IFC Fall Rushing To Begin Tonight

The Interfraternity Council fall rushing program will get underway with two showings of the film "A Toast to Your Brother" at 7 and 8:30 tonight in 119 Osmond.

Men interested in joining a fraternity are urged to attend according to Bruce Coble, chairman of the IFC rushing committee.

The IFC sponsors the fall rushing program each year to orient new men to the Penn State fraternity system and to arouse interest in fraternity membership among eligible men. No student is considered eligible for pledging unless he has an All-College average of 1.

According to IFC Rushing and Pledging Regulations, no freshman may be pledged by any fraternity until he has completed his first semester. Freshmen may be pledged in the second semester after first semester grades are released.

Magazine to be Distributed

The second phase of the rushing program will be open houses in each fraternity from 2 to 4:30 p.m. Nov. 1. These open houses will give independent men a chance to see facilities for study and recreation in each house. Members of each fraternity will be on hand to show visitors through the various houses and to answer questions.

The third part of the rushing program will be the distribution of the Penn State fraternity magazine during the first week of November. The booklet explains the Penn State fraternity system and includes information and pictures of each fraternity. The magazine also contains a copy of the IFC rushing and pledging regulations.

Chairman List Compiled

A letter explaining the purposes of the rushing program and preferential reply cards will also be enclosed in the magazine, Coble said. The reply cards will be used by independent men to show interest in a particular fraternity or group of fraternities. These cards will then be compiled into a master list for use by each fraternity in rushing programs.

A list of fraternity rushing chairmen will also be compiled and sent to resident dormitory counselors. Independent men may then contact the rushing chairmen of the fraternities in which they are interested.

Junior Class Talent Tryouts End Tomorrow

Final tryouts for the Junior Week talent show will be held at 7 p.m. tomorrow in 405 Old Main, Carole Avery, co-chairman, announced yesterday.

Call-backs for junior performers who tried out in the preliminary competition last night and Sunday will be announced tomorrow, Miss Avery said.

Six finalists will be selected this week to compete in the talent show Nov. 4 in the Temporary Union Building. The first place winner will receive an engraved loving cup and a ticket to the Junior Prom. Prom tickets will be awarded second and third place winners.

Judges for the talent show are Patricia Thompson, assistant to the dean of women; Ray Fortunato, director of Thespians; and Frank J. Simes, dean of men. Alec Beliasov, co-chairman, will be master of ceremonies.

Church Recognized For Clothing Gifts

Altar Society of Our Lady of Victory Church will receive a wall plaque for contributing the most in a Korean clothing drive sponsored by Phi Kappa Psi and Chi Omega.

The sponsors collected five tons of clothing which included shoes, blankets, sweaters and other articles. They had four days in which to complete the job, two days for collecting and two days for packing.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL CHOIR of London, on its first tour in 900 years, last night sang in Schwab Auditorium in the Community Concert's opening program. Christopher Palmer is one of the 48 English youngsters in the choir who earlier this month sang at the White House, as part of their 41-performance tour.

Concert Series Names Artists

Leonard Rose, cellist, will be among the four remaining artists to perform in the Community Concert series which opened last night with the St. Paul's Cathedral Choir of London.

Rose will perform Dec. 9. Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will sing Jan. 5. The Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra, composed of 15 instrumentalists, will play March 22. The group recently returned from a tour of South America.

Rudolf Firkusny, pianist, will conclude the series April 22. The artists were selected following the membership drive by the Community Concert Association's local board of directors and affirmed in New York.

Ed Photo Deadline

Today is the last day seniors in the School of Education may have their pictures taken for LaVie. Engineering seniors may report to the Penn State Photo Shop tomorrow through November 5.

80 Independents Vote For Town Council

Approximately 80 of the 3000 town independent men elected 19 representatives and 16 alternates to Town Council of the Association of Independent Men last week.

With less than three per cent of the town independents voting, one out of every 2.2 men who voted was elected.

Chester Chervinski, president; Francis Mears, vice president; and Byron Fielding, chairman of the AIM elections committee, were agreed that the turnout was the best in recent years.

Elections were held Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday evenings.

Twenty-three hundred postal cards were sent to town independents to inform them of the election. Approximately $50 was spent for the cards and printing. Cards went to town independents who had addresses listed in the temporary student directory, except eighth semester seniors.

Nevertheless, in some wards only one or two men showed up. In two wards, no one voted. The highest turnout for any one ward was 10 men. From 100 to 200 men live in a ward.

In some cases, when only a few men from one ward appeared, they drew lots to pick the representative and his alternate.

No one from wards nine and sixteen appeared.

Chervinski said that although less than three per cent of those eligible voted, he knew of no better way to get out the vote than to send postal cards to each eligible voter.

Council will hold its first meeting 7:30 p.m. tomorrow in 103 Willard. Main business to be conducted will be the appointment of committee members, Chervinski said. A discussion of the proposed reorganization of AIM will be held, he said.

Representatives will elect four or five representatives-at-large to AIM Board of Governors at tomorrow's or a later meeting, according to Mears.

Those elected and their alternates are:

Ward one: Gerald Davitt, George Hoffman; ward two: Henry Wielicki, Charles Logan; ward three: Paul Krivak, Leroy Kromis; ward four: Carl Peifer, Norman Weingarten; ward five:

(Continued on page eight)

Cup Given To Team Co-captains

Anthony Rados and Donald Malinak, football co-captains, received a football loving cup from the Association of Independent Men and Leonides Saturday night at the Autumn Ball in Recreation Hall.

Congratulating the team on its victory over Texas Christian University, Joe Somers, AIM president, explained that the cup would be presented each year to the captain of the team winning the Penn State-TCU game.

The cup was inscribed with the names of the players of both teams, the final score and the date.

The committee in charge of the dance received many comments concerning "The Tenth Wonder of the World," William Shifflett, committee co-chairman, reported. All comments were favorable, he said.

The "Tenth Wonder" consisted of stamping the hands of those attending the dance with a substance which could only be detected with ultra-violet light. This served to prevent the splitting of tickets and to aid in computing tickets sold, Shifflett said.

Approximately 532 attended the dance.

Competition to Begin For Ag Party Emcee

Competition for emcee of the Ag Hill Party will begin at 7 p.m. Nov. 14 in 109 Agriculture.

Fraternities, agriculture clubs and other organizations may sponsor candidates for the post. Three faculty members and two students will act as judges.

Prexy Discusses Relations Between Two Americas

By CHIZ MATHIAS

Today the South American countries have a better understanding of the United States than we have of our Latin American neighbors, Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower reported in a recent interview.

The Prexy sat at his desk in 203 Old Main busily preparing a formal report on his summertime goodwill tour to South America. Dr. Eisenhower declined commenting on details of individual nations until the report is presented to his brother, President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The goodwill emissary said he believed much of the misunderstanding between the two Americas could be cleared by more communication between newspapers.

"Latin American nations publish far more news about the United States than we publish on events occurring in their countries," he testified.

A former journalist himself, Dr. Eisenhower admitted that newspapers must concentrate on areas of major news relationships.

"But, he said, "our relationships with other parts of the world, such as Europe and the Far East, are no more important to us than relationships with Latin America. Hence, news from one area merits as much attention as that from another. I myself hope to see a greater coverage of not only news, but features from Latin America."

"During the 36-day trip, Dr. Eisenhower met with government officials in ten South American countries. He was greeted by Penn State alumni in each country.

The Prexy suggested an expansion of the exchange program for teachers and students as one means of building goodwill.

He pointed out that right now there are about 5000 students from one country alone, Venezuela, matriculating in colleges or secondary schools in the United States.

"When these students go home they become great interpreters of our country and the greatest ambassadors we have," he said.

While in South America Dr. Eisenhower received an honorary degree corresponding to LL.D. at the University of San Marcos, Peru, the oldest university in the Western Hemisphere. Central University of Venezuela and the University of the Andes in Colombia conferred doctorates in political science upon the Prexy.

When asked how the school systems of the two continents compare, Dr. Eisenhower replied that the educational system varies with each country in South America.

"Smaller percentages go to school than in our country, but the number is rapidly expanding. One is constantly impressed with the emphasis put on the humanities and the social studies," he stated.

A high rate of illiteracy still remains in some countries, he reported, but the problem is being tackled with vigor. The next ten years should see a real increase in literacy, he predicted.

He said that Venezuela is just completing an entire new university city at a cost of more than $134 million with provisions for a skyscraper library housing a million volumes.

Local governments in Latin America have contributed to understanding by erecting binational institutes, as in Sao Paulo, Brazil, where 7000 students are studying English and American literature without the benefit of translation. In Asuncion, Paraguay, 1200 students are participating in a similar program.

"All of South America is a great beehive of activity. Everywhere land is being cleared for agricultural expansion and new industrial and educational enterprises," he reported. "The countries are now marked by an industrial and educational revolution typical of our country during the late 19th century."

He explained that this rapid change creates new problems. Just as the United States depended upon England for development capital during its time of pioneer expansion, so Latin America is dependent upon the U.S., he continued. South America must look to us for much of the needed private and public capital, he said.

Latin American farming methods have traditionally been wasteful and primitive, he declared. However, in the past ten years we have supplied much technical personnel and "know how" to help them make their lands more productive, he added.

The Rockefeller Foundation and other agencies such as the Michigan State College, which has a sister school in Colombia,

Phys Ed School To Hold Mixer

The School of Physical Education will hold a "Hillbilly Hoedown" mixer at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow in White Hall.

Hal White, assistant professor of physical education, and the recreation department are in charge of the program. Entertainment will include games and square dancing. Refreshments will be served.

Dungarees and shirts will be proper dress for the evening.

Mortar Board Presents . . .

Mardi Gras

FRIDAY, OCT. 30

7:30 - 11:30

Coronation of King—

Games—

Refreshments .

Shows—

Rec Hall—

