College Gets NSA Commission

The National Students' Association subcommittee on student leadership has been awarded to the College, Robert Smoot, campus NSA coordinator, announced Thursday night at All-College Cabinet.

The job of the commission, Smoot said, is to collect information from NSA member schools concerning their leadership programs, conduct research and design programs to be used on other campuses. A plan will be designed for large, middle-sized and small schools, and a program will be developed for use on the NSA regional level, he added.

Smoot said the subcommittee was established by the national organization after the topic was adopted by the National Students' Congress this summer as a problem for study.

Smoot asked for the commission after cabinet approved a recommendation Sept. 24 requesting it. The recommendation was formed at the student leadership workshop at the Student Encampment at Mont Alto.

Members of the subcommittee staff will include Smoot as chairman, Charles McClintock, chairman of the leadership training committee, members of the NSA screening board and the supervisor of the NSA bureau in Cabinet Secretariat.

secretary of Cabinet Secretariat. Mary Lee Lauffer, fifth semester journalism major; Alan Pomeroy, fifth semester industrial engineering major; and William Dove, fifth semester aeronautical engineering major; were named secretariat bureau chairmen by Lemyre.

Greek Open Houses Set for Tomorrow

Open houses will be held in Penn State's 51 fraternities tomorrow from 2 to 4:30 p.m. These programs are the second phase of the Interfraternity Council fall rushing program.

The IFC sponsors the fall rushing program each year to orient new students to the Penn State fraternity system and to arouse interest in fraternity membership among independent men.

The first phase of the rushing program was completed Wednesday night with the final two showings of the film, "A Toast to Your Brother." Over 500 students attended the movie Tuesday and Wednesday nights, according to Bruce Coble, chairman of the IFC rushing committee. Question and answer periods were held following the movie.

Fraternity List Posted
One of the most frequently asked questions, Coble said, was if there were particular fraternities for majors in the various courses of the College. Coble announced yesterday that a list of fraternities and the nature of their membership have been posted on the bulletin board adjacent to the Student Union desk in Old Main.

During the open house programs tomorrow, independent men will be given an opportunity to observe facilities for study and recreation available in the various fraternity houses. Members of each fraternity will be on hand to answer questions.

Fraternity Magazine
The third phase of the IFC fall rushing program will get underway sometime within the next two weeks with the distribution of the "Penn State Fraternity Magazine" to all new men at the College. The magazine explains the fraternity system and includes a picture and information on each fraternity.

Procedures for rushing and a copy of the IFC Rushing and Pledging code is also included.

A letter explaining the purposes of the rushing program and preferential reply cards will also be included in the magazine, Coble said. The reply cards will be used by interested men to indicate which fraternities or group of fraternities they would like to rush.

Master List of Cards
These cards will then be compiled into a master list and sent to the rushing chairman of each fraternity for use in its individual rushing program.

Men whose names appear on these lists will then be contacted and rushed by various fraternities.

A list of fraternity rushing chairmen is also being compiled, Coble reported, and will be sent to resident dormitory counselors. This will enable students to contact the rushing chairmen of the houses in which they are interested.
