

Political Colloquy to Discuss 'Freedom - Can We Risk It?'

Four prominent Americans will be on campus Saturday through Monday to take part in a religious and political colloquy sponsored by the Department of Political Science, the Junior class and the Penn State Christian Association.

"Freedom—Can We Risk It?" will be the topic of the three-day colloquy. Problems of current importance to students in regard to academic freedom, threats to political freedom and other similar subjects will be discussed.

Attending the colloquy will be William Block, joint owner and publisher of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette; Genevieve Blatt, director of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government; Dr. Buell Gallagher, president of the City College of New York; and Norman Thomas, six times a candidate for the presidency on the Socialist ticket.

Block, graduate of Yale University and an independent in politics who has worked for freedom of the press, will participate in a symposium at 7:30 p.m. Sunday in 121 Sparks. Dr. Kent Foster, professor of history, will moderate the symposium in which all four guests will take part. A tea will be held for the speakers from 3 to 5 p.m. Sunday in McElwain lounge.

To Speak at Dinner

"Faculty and Student Freedom" will be Mrs. Blatt's topic at the faculty dinner at 7 p.m. Saturday at the Autoport. The former lawyer has also served as assistant city solicitor for Pittsburgh and deputy state treasurer of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Gallagher, author, preacher and former president of Tallahassee College in Florida and assistant commissioner of education for the United States, will speak on "The Meaning of Freedom" at Chapel services at 11 a.m. Sunday in Schwab Auditorium.

Thomas, elder statesman and speaker for freedom in politics, will participate in an open forum from 10 a.m. to noon Monday in the Little Theater in Old Main. Dr. Neal Riemer, assistant professor of political science, will serve as chairman of the forum.

To Conclude Colloquy

Thomas will conclude the colloquy at 8 p.m. Monday when he speaks on "Freedom: Yesterday and Today" in Schwab Auditorium. Kirk Garber, president of the Christian Association, will serve as chairman of the program.

Alice Murray, seventh semester education major, is chairman of the general committee for the colloquy. On the committee are Harry Shank, Ann Patterson, Linda Jacobs, Dorothy Osterhout, Duane Holm, Doris Humphrey and Sylvia Crum. Members of the Christian Association will serve as ushers.

Faculty consultants are the Rev. Luther H. Harshbarger, College chaplain and executive secretary of PSCA, Mary Jane Wyland, program coordinator of the Christian Association, Dr. John H. Ferguson, professor of political science, Dr. Robert B. Patrick, associate professor of education, Dr. Warren B. Miller, associate professor of chemistry, and Reimer.

Money-Growing Trees Precluded By Contraptions

Money never did grow on trees and it looks like it never will with the modern trend toward contraptions.

Members of the Agriculture Extension Service are using money "growing" on wooden arms to explain economics to farmers and foreign exchange students. This leaves the trees out for good.

To teach the theory of supply and demand in a more practical, rather than theoretical, manner, the Extension Service uses rubber money, stage money attached to weights and small bundles to symbolize production.

The demonstrations tend to make lectures more interesting and easier to understand. The extension service staff finds entertainment facilities advantageous in drawing crowds to its programs.

The service teaches or helps farmers throughout the state who are interested in practical information concerning their problems. The supply and demand demonstration was originated to explain the 30 per cent increase in beef prices last year.

Demonstrations are particularly helpful in teaching the American economic system to foreign students. By adding weighted money and bundles to opposite sides of a swinging arm, the students can get a visual picture of the situation.

Unfortunately, the Agriculture Extension Service still hasn't perfected a tree that will produce the money as well as balance it.

ships providing room, board, books, tuition and laundry. "The grant-in-aid idea has not taken up North," he said, "because officials there tell us we simply have a dual system of assistance—one of them under the table."

Moore said "there is no cheating" in intramural sports programs in colleges, and that perhaps the colleges would turn to intramural programs instead of intercollegiate competition.

Commissioner Bernie Moore of the Southeastern Conference, at Birmingham, declined comment on the NCAA president's talk.
