With elections for freshman and sophomore class officers in the offing, both campus parties have, out of tradition, come up with their platforms. Similarly, out of tradition, this separation is second to the platforms of the platforms of the platforms of tradition this second tradition.

class officers in the offing, both campus parties have, out of tradition, come up with their platforms. Similarly, out of tradition, this semester's political platforms say little, or nothing. For at least the past four years, political relatforms have been used to a part a minimum.

platforms have been vague and ambiguous pieces of nothing calculated to get votes. Campus politicians themselves often admit platforms mean nothing. Students know they mean nothing. Yet platforms continue.

A glance at the new platforms proves this point. Both parties have pledged to support a shorter customs program with elimination of dating restrictions. This appears désirable until it is understood the Joint Customs Board will probably enact such changes next year anyway, with or without either party's support. Thus this merely becomes a "we're in favor of sunshine" plank.

One party recommends conversion of an East dorm into a recreation building. This has been a plank before. The same party also "will ac-tively work for" expanded decentralized clique registration. This is an idea from the 1953 Student Encampment.

The other party pledges to strengthen the relationship between dorm men and women and town men, but does not suggest how. The same party also promises to provide a more workable and efficient resident counseling system. This is something the College is continually trying to do, and this party can probably do little, if anything, to provide such a system.

This party also will encourage improvement of a centralized bluebook file, something that can be done only by the students, not by any party. This party also proposes a central information bureau in the new Student Union, which is only a transfer of the present desk in Old Main. Finally, the party promises to work for a more efficient Orientation Week program.

Appearance Counts

The freshmen and sophomore election cam paigns this year will be characterized by leniency of restrictions concerning the placing of posters, something not permitted in the past. Cliques will be allowed to place posters in specified.

fied areas on campus grounds.

Previously it had been the practice to restrict posters to the Temporary Union Building and bulletin boards in the West Dorm lounge area. The thought exists that with posters restricted largely to marchants' windows in town stricted largely to merchants' windows in towr the effectiveness of the posters is lost.

The easing of the restrictions will permit the political parties a greater chance to reach the student voter. It will also provide a greater temptation to violate the existing restriction in the All-College election code.

The election code was set up as an instrument to guide elections so that campaigns will no only be conducted along ethical lines but to protect campus and town property as well. The code was not set up for the sport of seeing how often it can be violated without being caught.

Penn Staters have every right to be proud of the appearance of the campus. They also have the right to expect that the appearance of the campus is not marred by the overuse of political example of jumping on the band wagon.

Political platforms are traditionally as useless as this semester's. They are characterized by such hackneyed phrases as "strive towards," "work with someone to improve," "strongly support," and "promote." Absent are such dynamic words as "we will do," "we promise," and "we will carry out."

Some campus politicians will defend their

Some campus politicians will defend their vague phrases because they cannot promise anything as long as the College has final say. But platforms could and would be much more effective, and worthwhile, if they were the result of crying needs rather than last minute conferences.

To the freshman and sophomore classes, then, there is only one thing to say: Disregard the platforms and elect the candidates as individuals. It is unwise to bank on what is promised. It is more wise to bank on what has been done. Freshman and sophomore candidates have had little chance to really do anything. Their personal qualities, then, must determine their

Safety Valve... On Football Plays

TO THE EDITOR: In regard to the article appearing in the Daily Collegian on Tuesday, concerning the disputable Penn State-West Virginia football game, I am wondering what is happening to sportsmanship here at State. Is victory so much for us that we must denounce officials opposing players and goods are concerning. officials, opposing players and coaches, or anyone else concerned with a defeat?

The article written by Mr. Procopio appears to have been written from sheer emotion with omplete disregard for facts . . . How is it your statement (that a West Virinia player was offside and blocked a Penn inia player was offside and blocked a Penn state kick) is in disagreement with articles written in at least two syndicated newspapers which tell... it was impossible to tell, by novies, whether (the West Virginia player) was offside...? How is it that from a point about 50 yards downfield... you can see better than a man in a position of perfect sight to call a play?... Yes, sir, I guess every one has his troubles.

The University of Oregon's Daily Emrald recently carried a feaire regarding a proposal to rebuild the concrete "O" on top of one the campus buildings, the "O" being sort of a local Nittany Lion. It seems last spring, after the "O" had received its usual spring leanup and paint job, some pranksters set off several dyna-mite blasts to turn the "O" into greatly alter social life here." a "C" and spray neighboring lawns with rubble.

Not content with this little gem, which caused 123 indignant citizens to present a petition requesting removal of the "O," the pranksters then painted the "O" orange. The whole foul deed was blamed on Oregon State students.

Chances are the "O" will survive, though. Since it was built in 1909 it has been dynamited

The main contention is that any law affecting this situation is that it may be passed without a vote of the entire student body.

Here's a novel idea. At Brown University, students go to free movies during final exam week. The student board of governors schedules cartoons and short mo-tion pictures to relieve the pres-
