

Snow Delays Lion Soccer Tilt; Wernermen Seek 5th Victory

Navy Game Rescheduled For Today

By ROY WILLIAMS

A sudden snow storm which hit the Eastern seaboard in the Philadelphia - Baltimore - New York area early Friday morning caused the temporary delay of Penn State's scheduled soccer tilt with Navy at Annapolis, Md., yesterday.

The storm blanketed the Middle's field with four inches of snow. Yesterday's afternoon report from Navy said that the two teams will try to play today if the storm recedes and the playing field can satisfactorily be cleared of the snow.

The Lions are looking for their fifth win of the season in six starts, and their fourth on-the-road victory. The Middies own a two and three chart.

Coach Ken Hosterman and his sixteen-man traveling squad were originally told that the game was cancelled. As the Lions prepared to leave Annapolis by train, Navy then announced that they would try to clear the field in order to play the game today.

The Nittany squad will be hoping that the weatherman will permit them to meet the Navy eleven. The Middies were the boys that handed Penn State its only loss of the season last year, 3-2, when they visited the Nittany's field.

Bratton Stalls Title Exams

CHICAGO, Nov. 6 (AP)—Challenger Johnny Bratton kept Champion Kid Gavilan waiting at their examination and briefing today for next Friday night's welterweight title bout at the Chicago Stadium.

And the sullen disregard the two had for each other during the picture-taking hoopla surrounding the formal contract-signing before the Illinois State Athletic Commission seemed to promise a bitter third meeting in the ring.

The contract calls for Gavilan to get 40 per cent and Bratton 20 per cent of the approximate $14,000 net the sponsoring International Boxing Club could get from a capacity crowd of some 19,000.

Kraemer, Bosley Are Cited by AP

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 6 (AP)—Eldred Kraemer of the University of Pittsburgh and West Virginia University's Bruce Bosley rank high for tackle consideration by The Associated Press All-America nominating board.

Another Pitt player, Dick Deitrick, is receiving strong support for an end nomination. Bob Orders of West Virginia and Steve Korcheck of Nemaconlin, Pa., and George Washington University, are gaining strength among the center nominees for the team.

Nittany Guard Is Master Of Defensive Line Play

By RON GATEHOUSE

When a rabid grid fan attends a football game these days, whether it be high school, college, or pro caliber, he usually concentrates most of his speculation on the backs. And, following each skirmish, who is discussed most? Of course, the backs.

What about the other seven men on the lineup? Surely they must have something to do with making a team function. Due to the fact that the lines of each team are usually one big mass of over-anxious gridders on each play, only the trained eye can distinguish between the various linemen.

For the men in this class (linemen) who play good, hard football game after game, and yet go unnoticed except by teammates, the opposition, the coaching staff, and the well versed fans, a very appropriate name has been coined—"unsung heroes."

If you happen to be one of the more observant spectators, you have probably witnessed number 61 in action. He's hard-charging, bone crushing, Pete Schoderbek, left guard on offense, and defensive middle line-backer.

From 'Promised Land' The locomotive-like griddler hails from Duquesne in the region often tabbed by college football scouts as their "promised land." Ironic in the sense of Pete's above grid classification is that his hometown address is 1014 Hero avenue.

The 190 pound, 6 foot senior is enjoying his fourth year of football at State. A sure winner on any team, Pete has exhibited sterling play in his four year stay in the Nittany Valley. A shoulder injury received in a skirmish last year hampered him most of the season. The injury was again inflicted in the Penn encounter early in the season, but has failed to keep the stocky griddler out of action.

Upon graduating and completing his two years of required service with Uncle Sam, the science major plans to enter the oil business somewhere in the Midwest.

Outstanding Against Penn The likeable Pete considers his best games over the past two seasons to be both Penn encounters, with last year's standing as the biggest thrill of his football career. The story goes that one of Pete's five brothers had played an outstanding game for the Middies of the Naval Academy when they met the Quakers, the week before the Lions invaded the "City of Brotherly Love."

Naturally, both the opposition and the fans were anxious to see how well 'brother Schoderbek' would do. Needless to say, the Nittany stalwart was continually clogging Penn's grid machine throughout the game. Incidentally, the Navy-Penn score was 14-14. The final State-Penn tally was 13-7. Need we say more?

In closing, there is but one comment. Pete Schoderbek is one of our own Nittany Lions' serving as an excellent example of the many "unsung heroes" throughout the nation.

Lions to Face Jaspers; Eye Unbeaten Season

Manhattan's cross-country team may have started the season like "A Slow Boat to China," but the Jaspers are now rolling along like "The Wabash Cannonball."

George Eastment's harriers pulled an upset victory recently in the metropolitan intercollegiate cross-country meet. The Jaspers had entered the title run with an unimpressive dual meet record. But they once again performed at their best when the chips were down.

Chick Werner, Lion coach, left early yesterday morning with a seven-man squad for today's meet with the New Yorkers. Captain Red Hollen, Lamont Smith, Doug Moorhead, Jim Hamill, Ted Garrett, John Chillrud and Ed Steel will face Manhattan on Van Cortlandt Park's five-mile course.

Hollen Paces Workout Hollen paced the Nittany hill-and dalers in a workout on Wednesday. He covered the 2 1/2-mile run in 10:26.5. Smith and Moorhead were third and fourth with times of 10:39 and 10:41.

Jim DeBraggio finished fourth in the metropolitan intercollegiate race with a time of 26:51 and paved the way for Manhattan's victory. The Jaspers captured the crown for the sixth time in seven years. They had won it five seasons in a row before St. John's defeated them last year.

Jaspers Show Balance Good balance enabled Manhattan to recapture the title. The five Jaspers who figured in the scoring finished among the top 11 in the six-team race. Charley Saaga, Bob Goodwin, Bob Kubie and Bill St. Clair nailed down the eighth, ninth, tenth and 11th positions in the meet. St. Clair finished less than one minute behind DeBraggio with a clocking of 27:42.

St. John and NYC tied for second; Fordham was fourth and Columbia fifth. A squad from CCNY also entered; however, five men did not finish for the City College team.

Last Dual Meet This will be the final dual meet of the campaign for the Blue and White. On Nov. 17 the Lions will compete on the Van Cortlandt Park course again, this time in the

Terry Headed For Brooklyn's Managership

VERO BEACH, Fla., Nov. 6 (AP) Reports circulated in this baseball town today that Bill Terry, former New York Giants' manager, now a Florida business man, is the latest hot prospect as manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

The report was given credence by the arrival of Walter O'Malley, Dodgers' president, for an inspection tour of the club's big Vero Beach spring training camp. He was accompanied by Fresno Thompson, vice president.

"Is Bill Terry coming to see you while you're here?" O'Malley was asked.

"If he does I'll be glad to see him."

"Are you going to offer him the manager's post?"

"I have nothing to say about that," replied O'Malley.

"The manager's job has not been offered to anyone and therefore nobody has rejected it."

He declined to name any likely prospects.

Terry isn't alone in the list of possibilities. Others heard in passing are Bucky Harris of the Washington Senators; Jimmy Dykes, recently with the Philadelphia Athletics; Frankie Frisch; Lefty O'Doul, manager at San Diego, and Clay Hopper and Walt Alston, Dodger farm system managers.

State to Visit South

Penn State's football team will travel to Forth Worth next year to play Texas Christian University.

IC4A championship run. Several streaks are at stake in today's encounter:

A five meet win skein by the Lions will be under fire.

A four meet win skein over Manhattan dating back to 1949 will also be in jeopardy.
