

Grid Conference Under Dudley Is 'News' to College

Athletic Director Ernest B. McCoy said last night that the College has not been approached in any way in regard to the newly proposed Northeastern Conference.

The conference, under plans formulated by Bud Dudley, athletic director of Villanova College, would be a ten-team football league, with each member playing seven or eight teams within the ranks.

Dudley named Penn State, along with Villanova, Rutgers, Boston University, Boston College, Syracuse, Holy Cross, Colgate, Temple and Fordham as possible members.

"We have not been approached by anyone," McCoy said, "and I would not be in a position to discuss it (the proposed conference) until the matter was discussed with the Athletic Advisory Board and the Board of Trustees."

Assistant Athletic Director Harold R. Gilbert said that school officials knew nothing about the league. He termed the proposal as "wishful thinking by other institutions."

"The Pennsylvania State College would be open to thoughts of a league if it was for its betterment," he said, "but I am not interested in this particular league proposal."

Both McCoy and Gilbert first heard about the proposal through wire service releases Friday night and Saturday. Neither they or Head Football Coach Rip Engle were contacted by Dudley.

yard stripe. Yalch evened matters at 21-21 with his conversion.

Penn State's endeavor to get back into the scoring column was halted when Franz intercepted a Rados pass. Three plays later, Rados returned the gesture by intercepting Franz' pass. Rados brought the pigskin from his own 49 to Fordham's 45.

With fourth down and one yard to go for a first down, Rados made two on a sneak play. The following play saw Younker take an inside reverse from Rados. He twisted and turned beautifully past Fordham's secondaries to score. To make sure he would reach the goal line on his 35-yard run, Younker leaped a few yards from the chalk mark, landing on one foot then rolling into the end zone. Garrity's third conversion was good.

Had it not been for Engle's fast charging line, Franz may have scored again before the final gun had blown. He passed his team from his own 25 to State's 12. Palmieri, however, found himself in the minus department as Garrity and Shumaker made the tackle. The Fordham QB incompleting a pass. Then completed one to Murphy for six yards.

Franz' fourth down "do-or-die" pass play, died when Garrity, Rosey Grier and Otto Kneidinger dropped him for a ten yard loss. Rados ran out the clock to end the game.

struck the East coast over the weekend.

Jim Hamill, the fifth Penn Stater to finish, was sixth. His time of 27:25 was slightly more than a minute behind the time record by the first three Nittany hill-and-dalers.

John Chillrud crossed the finish line in eighth place with a time of 27:44. The seventh and final Nittany runner was Ed Steel. His clocking of 28:05 was good enough for 12th place.

Seventh place went to J. Enright of George Eastman's newly-crowned metropolitan intercollegiate cross-country squad.

Supreme Court Rules Baseball Is a Sport

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9 (AP)—Baseball won a major victory today when the Supreme Court ruled for the second time that, in the eyes of federal law, the game is a sport and not an interstate business.

This means that baseball cannot be challenged in the courts as an illegal monopoly and that the game's controversial reserve clause will stay on the books unless Congress does something about it.

Rep. Keating (R-NY), chairman of the monopoly subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee, said in the wake of the decision that he knows of no legislation in the works to put baseball under the antitrust laws or to exempt it specifically.

He said, however, it was possible the Supreme Court decision might lead to the introduction of a bill that would clarify how Congress stands on the issue.

The monopoly subcommittee studied the question extensively two years ago, but took no action.

Chief Justice Warren read today's brief opinion, to which two justices dissented. It was a "per curiam" decision, that is, one issued by the court rather than over the signature of an individual justice. Apparently the court split 7-2 on the question.

Justice Burton got out a vigorous dissent, in which Justice Reed concurred.

The majority decision held that there is no reason to overturn the Supreme Court ruling of 1922, written by the late Justice Holmes, in which it was decided unanimously that baseball is not subject to the nation's antitrust laws.

"We think," Warren said, "that if there are evils in this field which now warrant application to it of the antitrust laws, it should be by legislation."

The court's decision, Warren continued, was made "without re-examination of the underlying issues" and on the authority of the 1922 ruling that "Congress had no intention of including the business of baseball within the scope of the federal antitrust laws."

Baseball men, from Commissioner Ford Frick on down, reported themselves as highly pleased with the decision.

Three cases were before the high court in appeals on behalf of George Toolson, a former farm player for the New York Yankees; Walter J. Kowalski, a former Brooklyn farm player, and Jack Corbett, former owner of an El Paso, Tex., minor league club.

Lower courts had dismissed the actions of Toolson, Kowalski and Corbett on the precedent of the 1922 decision.

In appealing to the Supreme Court, the three argued that baseball's reserve clause violates the Constitution.

Today's decision did not decide that question one way or the other. It was to the effect only that baseball is not subject to the antitrust laws.

The reserve clause is a provision written into all baseball contracts to bind players to the clubs which "own" them. Their baseball services are completely controlled by the clubs which hold their contracts.

Attorneys arguing for the overthrow of the 1922 decision contended this clause puts baseball players in a position "equal to slavery."

Notre Dame Tops AP Poll; W. Virginia Drops One

Notre Dame is still running a strong No. 1 in the race for the season's college football championship for the seventh straight week, according to the Associated Press.

The Associate Press top twenty reads: 2. Maryland, 3. Illinois, 4. Michigan State, 5. Georgia Tech, 6. Oklahoma, 7. UCLA, 8. West Virginia, 9. Baylor, 10. Texas, 11. Mississippi, 12. S. California, 13. Kentucky, 14. Duke, 15. Minnesota, 16-17 (tie) Rice and Stanford, 18. Tennessee, 19. Texas Tech, 20. Auburn.

AVIATION ENGINEERING

Today More Than Ever . . . offers a Sound, Well-Paid FUTURE with a Leader Like CURTISS-WRIGHT

Today's graduate engineer seeking a secure, well paid career will do well to look to the aviation industry, provided he joins a leader with permanent roots in the field.

Such a company is CURTISS-WRIGHT, and here is why it will continue to provide exceptional engineering career opportunities of many kinds.

● Aviation is a precision industry in which new developments are rapid and continuous. Curtiss-Wright, always in the forefront of these advancements, is a center of research programs that go beyond aviation itself and thus create new products and processes affecting many other industries as well. The company's leadership in military aviation power is assured by long range research and development plans. Commercial production is growing, in both aviation and developments in other industries.

● To meet aviation's need for ever-better materials and techniques, Curtiss-Wright explores many fields — hydraulics, mechanics, electronics, plastics and metallurgy . . . new alloys and casting methods. Out of this research come not only improved propellers and powerplants, but many products with applications in general industry.

● So great an asset is this pool of engineering experience that it has become a bulwark to the national defenses and economy.

● For these reasons, including the wide range of projects at Curtiss-Wright, the company offers stability and solid career jobs for qualified engineers. One may choose his favorite field or specialty and look for increasing advancements and rewards as fast as he can assume responsibility.

WRIGHT AERONAUTICAL DIVISION, at Wood-Ridge, N. J., leads in the development and production of reciprocating and jet engines, and development of turboprops and ramjets.

PROPELLER DIVISION, at Caldwell, N. J., is engaged in many projects other than the name implies. In addition to propeller research and production, it embraces machine design, stress analysis, aerodynamics, hydraulics, metallurgy, electronics, servo-mechanisms, instrumentation and controls.

Jobs are waiting for engineers in these fields:

AERONAUTICAL • MECHANICAL METALLURGICAL

If you want permanence, progress and good pay that grows better, living near your work in a desirable home area, contact your placement office for additional information and arrange for an interview with our representatives when they visit the campus.
