

Windcrest to Be Carnival Site; Group to Revise Point System

The Spring Week committee Thursday night selected the Spring Carnival site and began a revision of the Spring Week point system, George Richards, chairman, announced yesterday.

The point system is being re-evaluated, Richards said, to prevent student groups from winning the Spring Week trophy merely by acquiring the most carnival points.

1400 to Attend Ag Hill Party In Rec Hall

More than 1400 students and faculty members are expected to attend the annual Ag Hill Party tonight in Recreation Hall. Tickets will be on sale at the door.

The party will begin at 5:15 p.m. with a cafeteria style dinner. At 7 p.m., Richard Ahern, seventh semester agronomy major, will lead group singing. Agriculture products will serve as prizes for the free bingo games from 7:15 to 8:15 p.m. The Varsity Quartet will present a special musical program after the bingo games. Winners of the School of Agriculture scholarships will receive awards at 8:30 p.m. Following the presentation of awards Ross Lytle and his orchestra will play for round and square dancing until midnight.

Clubs appointed to committees are: tickets, Grange and 4-H; decorations, Hort Club; food, Future Farmers of America, Zoology, Botany and Rod and Crocus Clubs; entertainment, Agriculture Economics Club; reception, Coaly Society; check room, Forestry Society; dining room, Clover and Poultry Clubs and the Liebig Chemical Society; trucking, Block and Bridle Club; clean-up, Agriculture Engineering and Pre-Vet Clubs; name cards, General Agriculture Club and bingo, Dairy Science Club.

Glenn Wiggins, ninth semester forestry major, will be master of ceremonies. Faculty committee in charge of the party include Glenn R. Kean, assistant professor of animal husbandry, chairman; Roy C. Buck, assistant professor of rural sociology, and William R. Davey, instructor of dairy husbandry.

The Windcrest area near College avenue, where trailers have been removed, was selected for the carnival site, Richards said. The carnival will be held Wednesday and Thursday nights of Spring Week, May 10-13.

Only Feasible Location

He said this was the only feasible location since the Department of Physical Plant has prohibited the use of the parking lot behind Sigma Nu and Sigma Chi where last year's carnival was held.

The physical plant refused the use of the area because of damage done last year to the shrubbery near the parking lot.

In re-evaluating Spring Week points, Richards said an attempt is being made to establish a more equal ratio between the point value of the carnival and other Spring Week events.

Carnival Points Decreased

As a result, the point value of carnival tickets will be decreased and the points awarded for other events increased, he said.

Carnival tickets will be valued at one-half a point instead of one point as in the past, Richards said.

Parade points will be increased from 50 to 100 points for each entry. Four hundred points will be awarded to parade winners instead of the 100 points given last year, Richards said.

Re-evaluation Incomplete

The number of points to be awarded for the He-Man contest, the Miss Penn State contest, the Mad-Hatters parade, and the Ugly Man contest have not yet been determined. The re-evaluation will be completed in about two weeks, Richards said.

The points for the He-Man and Miss Penn State contests will probably be increased, Richards said, but Mad Hatters parade points may be decreased.

If Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, wished to again sponsor the Ugly Man contest as part of Spring Week, the points awarded in the contest will also be increased, Richards said.

Laughton Show Ticket Sales Begin Thursday

Tickets for "An Evening with Charles Laughton," next Community Forum program, will go on sale for $2 Thursday at the Student Union desk in Old Main. Season tickets for the remaining three programs will be on sale Monday to Wednesday for $3.75 at the desk.

Laughton's reading tours, according to Life magazine, have brought about "a new trend in public entertainment."

Crossing the stage with an armload of books, Laughton chooses to read what he himself likes. These include Thomas Wolfe's "Of Time and the River," some Shakespeare, James Thurber's works, Dicken's "Pickwick Papers," Mark Twain's "Life on the Mississippi," some poetry, some essays, and the Bible.

Interspersing his reading with sharply discerning comments, Laughton only appears to be reading. Actually he knows the text of all that he reads by memory.

He visits an average of 50 cities a year putting on the program.

Erwin D. Canham, editor of the Christian Science Monitor, and Chester Bowles, former ambassador to India, will also speak this year on the Forum program.

Workshop Speaker

LLOYD S. COCHRAN, vice chairman of the National Interfraternity Conference, who outlined steps to opportunity at the fourth annual IFC Workshop banquet held last night at the Nittany Lion Inn.

Cochran Outlines Steps to Opportunity

Lloyd S. Cochran, vice chairman of the National Interfraternity Conference, last night outlined the steps whereby modern society may prepare for opportunity when it comes.

Cochran, speaking at the fourth annual IFC Workshop Banquet at the Nittany Lion Inn, told his audience the old axiom, "Opportunity only knocks once," no longer applies.

"We are living today under a different set of circumstances and impelling motives than we did years ago," Cochran stated.

Certain Tenets Needed

There are certain things which every fraternity man must live by before the opportunity which fraternities offer can be fully realized, he said. These included the basic tenets which guided our forefathers.

Cochran especially emphasized thriftiness. "Many of the things we enjoy are due to our forefathers' thriftiness," Cochran said. "Individuals as well as organizations must learn the vital importance of this old-fashioned but vital tenet," he said.

Applying the idea of thriftiness to today's fraternities, Cochran pointed out that fraternities must be based on sound business practices and intelligent control of house finances if they are to be successful.

Public Relations Important

Cochran also listed public relations as a matter of vital importance for the maintenance of fraternities in today's society. Stating that every fraternity man and every fraternity has an obligation in the matter of public relations, Cochran pointed out that it is first necessary to do something which is worthy of being told.

In closing, Cochran stressed the importance of living by our forefathers' spiritual values, the ideals exemplified in the lives of our country's founders and the ideals expressed at fraternity initiations. It is necessary for fraternities to have a solid foundation of spiritualism if they are to take their rightful place in the college community, he stated. If we can put into our chapters and national organizations those things which have made our country great, we will be ready for opportunity when it comes, he said.
