

Historical Records Housed in Library

By GAY SNODGRASS

A lull in the social whirl due to approaching exams may find some students unhappily stumbling up the steps of Pattee Library to face one of the grimmer aspects of university life—studying. Though some may even walk up another flight of stairs to the second floor, probably very few students have ever trudged the four flights to the Penn State Room.

Cwens Will Award Three Scholarships

Cwens, sophomore women's hat society, will award three $50 scholarships next week to three of the five fifth semester women who applied for them last year. The awards, given on the basis of scholarship, strength of character, and financial need, are a continuation of a project begun by the society last year.

Approximately three more scholarships will be offered to third and fourth semester students at the end of the spring semester, Patricia Douthett, scholarship committee chairman, said.

Glancing Around—

did notice the bathroom could without too much trouble be converted to the necessary degree of black.

The conversion was on. When it was complete, I informed all concerned that should any dire circumstances arise, the service station on the corner was open.

I proceeded with the task with boundless enthusiasm. Only after I started trying to load the film onto the tank reel did I remember a peculiarity of 35 millimeter film that the instructions pointed out.

The end was supposed to be cut square before trying to load the film on the reel. I tried to tear it off square in the dark. The result was not too promising. I kept trying to load it. The film kept balking.

I decided to try the other end. The other end of the film was curled up as tight as a coil spring. Every time I tried to load it, it would balk, then snap back at me. I tried again. It snapped at me again. I snapped at it. Anyone care for half a roll of film?

After many perspiration-filled minutes, I discovered I was trying to load the film on the wrong side.

The developing went along quite smoothly.

It was too bad I had taken all the pictures on top of each other.

WSGA to Collect Closet 'Remnants'

If Santa Claus replaced your old coats and sweaters, don't store them away in the back of your closet! Send them abroad to the less "fortunates" through the annual clothing drive sponsored by the House of Representatives of the Women's Student Government Association.

Boxes for donations have been placed in each of the dormitory units. The drive, which started Monday, will continue until the desired quota is reached, Marie Wagner, chairman of the clothing drive committee, said.

The clothes will be shipped abroad by the Friends' committee in State College.

Now's the Time To Feed Birds, Zoo Prof Says

Now's the time of year to do one for the birds, according to Merrill Wood, associate professor of zoology.

"Birds need feeding from early November until late April," Wood said. Although he admits it may never replace television, he says that watching a bird feeder can be a lot of fun.

Several types of feeders are available, according to Wood. There is a store-bought variety which automatically serves food as the birds eat and the homemade type which is merely a tray with a roof to keep weather out and a rim to keep food in.

The feeding station may be fastened to a tree, attached to a window sill, or to the side of the house.

Stocking the feeder is no problem, Wood pointed out. Cracked corn, suet, sunflower seeds, and bread crumbs will attract many birds, including cardinals, white breasted nuthatches, chickadees, tufted titmice, English sparrows, juncos, tree sparrows, and even woodpeckers.

Wood stressed the need for patience in the prospective bird watcher.

"Too often the owner becomes distraught if birds do not flock to his feeder as soon as it's open for business," he said.

It may take two or three weeks before the birds find a station, Wood explained, but once they do find a roost they'll stay with it as long as it is kept supplied with feed.

Career Women Debate Topic

The men's affirmative debating team will debate the women's team from Mount Mercy on woman's place in the business world at 7:30 p.m. Friday in 121 Sparks. Thomas Farrell and Louis Martini, eighth semester arts and letters majors, will debate for the University team.

The meeting of the two teams is an annual affair. The question will be Resolved: that the continued movement from the home into industry and professions by women does more harm than good.

The second half of the debate will be presented at Mount Mercy on Feb. 8.
